Molotoff Says Russia Stays Out of War

CHILLS BRITISH HOPE FOR HELP AGANST NAZIS

Conflict Intensification In Near Future Seen By Commissar.

CALLS U. S. 'MISERS'

Points Possibilities of Italian Relations in World Report.

(By Associated Press)

MOSCOW — Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff told the Russian parliament today that Soviet Russia "is not taking part in the war" and predicted its early intensification with "England, assisted by the United States," on the one hand fighting Germany and Italy on the other

Recent events, including collapse of France, had only served to improve Russia's relations with Germany Molotoff declared in a four months' review of foreign relations while saying better understanding with England could hardly be expected in view of past anti-Soviet manifestations on the part of the British government.

"Of our relations with the United States," Molotoff said, "it can be said that the United States do not like our successes, especially in the Baltics, but we are not interested. We can get along without the help of these misers."

"We support the protest of the governments of the Baltics at freezing their gold in the United States. We warn the United States and England they will be held responsible"

Molotoff, giving the Russian parliament a summary of recent European events, including the collapse of France, said Britain was trying to "scare us" with the prospect of a clash with Germany

The Soviet foreign commissar said this is impossible.

'The basis of German-Soviet relations for both countries is good," he declared.

Relations with Italy, he continued, "are full of possibilities." The Soviet, he added, is keeping

Her position indicated that she might be in a convoy bound for Canada, possibly with refugee children.

The statement was cited by Nazi newspapers as proof of the "feeling in the United States that Great Britain cannot win."

For Willkie

George White, former Democratic governor of Ohio and one-time national Democratic chairman, has announced he will support Wendell Willkie Republican presidential candidate, and not President Roosevelt.

NOT SURPRISED AT WHITE WALK

Observers Recall President Endorsed Bulkley Over Former Governor.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Ohio political observers privately expressed little surprise today at the announcement of former Gov. George White, one-time chairman of the Democratic national committee, that he would support Republican Wendell L. Willkie for president.

One informed person at state Democratic headquarters asserted that White had never forgotten President Roosevelt's implied endorsement of former Sen. Robert J. Bulkley of Cleveland during a speech at Marietta, White's home, in 1938 when White was opposing Bulkley for the U. S. senatorial nomination.

Bulkley subsequently won the nomination but was defeated by Robert A Taft, Republican, in the election

Observers also pointed out that Willkie managed White's successful campaign for governor in Summit county in 1930 when the 1940 Republican presidential nominee was a Democratic leader at Akron.

White's prepared statement said he supported Mr. Roosevelt

Broken Stone Flying From Emery Wheel Kills Polisher.

Struck in the forehead by a piece of emery stone which flew off a grinding wheel at the Art Rattan works shortly before noon yesterday, Robert L. Kelser, 25, of 416 St. Clair street, died Wednesday afternoon in General hospital without regaining consciousness.

Kelser, who was employed as a polisher at the Art Rattan plant on Park avenue east, was polishing a piece of metal on a 10-inch wheel when the piece of stone suddenly broke loose and struck him with terrific force, fellow employes said.

He crumpled to the floor and fellow workers summoned an ambulance to remove him to the hospital Physicians said his skull was fractured by the blow. He died shortly before 3 p m. Kelser had been employed at the Art Rattan works for about four years.

Company officials said there was nothing to indicate the grinding stone was defective, and they pointed out that emery wheels often dislodge pieces while turning at high speed in industrial plants. The grinding wheels are used in the Art Rattan plant to polish metal pieces for seat frames.

Born In Mansfield.

Kelser was born in Mansfield, Dec. 22, 1915, and had always lived in Mansfield and Lucas communities He was a graduate of Lucas high school and a member of St John's Evangelical church in Mansfield.

Two-Ocean Navy Defense Bill Ready for Passage.

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The $4,963,151,957 two-ocean navy-national defense measure, passed by the house with only a single negative vote, was sent to the senate today for final passage.

The measure would provide funds to begin the construction of the largest navy in the world and the manufacture of materials for a 2,000,000 man army.

Except for a provision for a $7,000,000 drydock in New York to service the navy's largest battleship, which was deleted for further committee study, the legislation passed the house in practically the same form the president requested.

Seeks 2 More Detectives To Help Solve House Robberies

As the result of a wave of house breakings in the past month, Police Chief Meade K. Bates today asked the city administration for two additional men for the detective bureau.

Bates told Mayor William J. Locke and Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton that it is impossible for the two officers he has in the detective bureau to conduct all the investigations that are necessitated by the almost daily reports of robberies.

He said that in order to fill the need he would have to take two men from the newly organized traffic squad, which would weaken that branch.

The traffic squad, made up of four officers on full time traffic duty, has made enforcement a steady program, issuing the largest number of tickets in July ever turned out in one month by the police department, Bates said. He said he was reluctant to change that program now that it was well established.

"One or the other," he told Locke, "must suffer. We can take care of the additional investigations or we can carry on our traf-

Bargain Days And Perfect Weather Keep Stores Busy

Shoppers from Mansfield and vicinity took advantage of the "perfect weather" today to bargain hunt on the opening day of the semi-annual Bargain Days

There was unusual activity on the down town streets before the stores opened at 9 a. m. and stores were busy throughout the morning.

Fifty Mansfield retail stores are taking part in the merchandising event. The most sought after bargains were in ready to wear apparel and shoes, although stores selling furniture and household equipment were also busy.

All participating stores are marked with red and yellow banners or pennants. The bargain event runs through Friday after which merchandise will return to former prices

Buses running from residential sections to the down town district were filled with morning shoppers who took advantage of the free ride down town. This was a feature for Thursday morning only.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. ROELIFF BRINKERHOFF

Three-Day Illness Fatal To Widow Active in Cultural, Welfare Movements.

ORGANIZER OF RED CROSS

Served as Chairman and Also Aided in Drive to Build General Hospital.

Mrs Jane Oliver Brinkerhoff 74, widow of the late Roeliff Brinkerhoff and one of a group of Mansfield women who over a long period of years contributed largely to the cultural and civic welfare of Mansfield, died at her home, 35 Bartley avenue, last evening after an illness of only three days.

Mrs Brinkerhoff had been in ill health for a number of years but was active in her home until early this week

Although identified with one of the oldest families in the city and a rich contributor to the development of Mansfield, she was not widely known outside of her own circle of friends and acquaintances, because of her modest and unassuming personality.

She was born in Alliance Jan 13, 1866; the daughter of John Flannigan and Catherine Hooker Oliver. Her mother was a descendant of one of the first pioneer families of Richland county. At the time of her birth her father was on military duty at army headquarters in Alliance, where he was stationed the last two years of the Civil war and for several succeeding years

Her marriage to Roeliff Brinkerhoff of Mansfield took place June 24, 1896 and she came here to make her home at that time.

Cool Weather To Stay at Least for Another 24 Hours

Fair and comfortable weather prevailed in Mansfield and throughout the nation today as the 13-day heat wave was broken, but the weatherman warned that it was only a respite which would be followed by another hot spell.

The welcome and comfortable interlude is due to last at least until tomorrow afternoon, with cloudy skies tomorrow and possibly thundershowers.

In sharp contrast to the 95 degrees which prevailed for several days in Mansfield, the thermometer stood at 75 at noon today, with a near-chilly breeze blowing at times.

During the night the mercury dropped to 55, indicating that the long promised "mass of cool air" had finally arrived. A cool breeze from the northwest yesterday caused temperatures over the nation to recede 10 to 20 degrees from the 100 degrees which prevailed in many areas on Tuesday

The recession failed to check heat deaths however, and nine persons died of heat prostrations yesterday and three were drowned, bringing the total in the state directly attributable to the heat, to 115.

All Passengers In Coach Die In Ohio Disaster

Occupants of Motor-Driven Car Burned By Flaming Gasoline After Head-On Collision With Two-Locomotive Freight Train Near Akron

(By United Press)

CUYAHOGA FALLS—The head-on collision of a freight train and a self-propelled passenger car here last evening, which took the lives of 43 passengers, was attributed today to the failure of one of the train crews to go on a siding.

E. W. Smith, vice-president of the Pennsylvania railroad, said at Pittsburgh that the crew of a motor-driven passenger coach had specific orders to take a siding to permit a 74-car freight train pulled by two locomotives to pass. It didn't and they collided in the center of this town of 20,000 persons at 6 p. m. yesterday.

Pennsylvania officials had been joined by inspectors of the interstate commerce commission in an effort to establish responsibility. The single-track line branches off from the main line at Hudson, O., and runs to Akron, 15 miles away.

"The crew of the motor car not only disregarded their orders to stop at switch No 1 at Silver Lake and to wait on the siding," Smith said, "but, in continuing on the main track from Silver Lake toward Akron, disregarded another rigid rule, as permission was required from the block operator at Hudson to make this further movement. This permission was not obtained"

He absolved the crew of the freight train.

There were 46 persons in the passenger coach, propelled by a gasoline motor a type of conveyance known locally as a "Doodle-bug" The engineer and the two members of the crew saw that a collision was inevitable and jumped, saving their lives and the other 43 passengers, who included several railroad employes, were killed.

Coroner R. E. Amos, who had announced several hours earlier that 41 were dead, added two more to the death toll today. A check of 14 funeral homes in the area revealed that 36 bodies had been identified. Eight still were nameless.

A 44th death was attributed to the crash, Mrs. Eva George, 70, was found dead, apparently of a heart attack, in her home a short distance from the scene shortly after the wreck.

It was the second disaster in less than four months on American railroads. A New York Central express train jumped the tracks at Little Falls, N. Y., April 19 and 31 persons were killed.

The cause of last evening's disaster was clear—the engineers of

VICTIMS 'NEVER HAD A CHANCE'

Witnesses Tell Graphic Stories of Horrible Deaths Met By Coach Passengers.

(By International News Service)

AKRON — The 43 persons who met flaming death last night in the head-on crash of a Pennsylvania railroad gasoline-electric car and a freight train at Cuyahoga Falls never had a chance, witnesses said today.

R H Martin, Akron, one of the first to reach the scene, said

"The interior of the car was a mass of flames, with flames shooting out of every window. Most of the glass was broken. I saw a girl's charred hand extending from one window. Its fingers spread out in the flames. All the clothing had been burned from the arm

"Another window was jammed by a mass of bodies.

Working at top speed in his effort to identify the victims of the wreck, Coroner R. E. Amos declared: "Those poor people never had a chance."

Veteran Akron firemen and policemen declared they never had seen such a fire.

"I've seen some awful ones in my day," a fireman said, "but this is the worst yet."

O. M. Lodge of Columbus, freight train engineer, and E. N. Reynolds of Orrville, fireman, stayed with the locomotive until it had ground to a stop, surround-

The jury's report is expected to include a number of secret indictments against persons who must be taken into custody when the indictment warrants are served.

When the jurors report to the court they will have studied at least 32 cases, one of the heaviest dockets to face a Richland county grand jury in recent years.

Believes Death Came to 43 On 'Doodle-Bug' Instantly

By L. P. SEILER
Fire Chief of Cuyahoga Falls

CUYAHOGA FALLS —(UP)— I was at the scene of the wreck two minutes after it occurred. The Doodle-bug was already a furnace.

Flames shot out the windows, darted high in the air. The fire was like a screen and it was almost impossible to see what it was like inside the car.

Then, for just a second, the wind parted the flames and I caught a glimpse of the interior. It was terrible! I was sure everybody in there was dead. They must have died almost instantly; I heard no screams at all.

Some of the victims were hanging partly out of the windows and they were on fire. The freight train couldn't seem to stop and it kept pushing back the Doodle Some of the burning bodies fell out of the windows and were strung out along the right-of-way. They were all shattered and bleeding and burnt.

We couldn't do anything at first. Everything was so hot it was impossible to get near the car. We finally played three lines of water on the fire for 20 minutes before we could get inside the coach.

The interior looked as if a tornado had hit it. All the seats were torn loose from their bases and were piled in a heap in the front part of the car The same thing happened to most of the passengers. They were jammed to the ceiling at the forward end. We had to use acetylene torches to free some of the bodies. Most of them were so charred they couldn't be recognized.

Windsors Sail Incognito Today for United States

COUPLE BOARD LINER BOUND FOR NEW YORK

Due to Arrive in America Aug. 9 Before Taking on Bahamas Job.

(By Associated Press)

LISBON, Portugal — The Duke and Duchess of Windsor, traveling simply as "Captain and Mrs. Wood," were to sail for New York aboard the American export liner Excalibur at 6 p. m. today (12 noon, EST). The ship is due in New York Aug. 9.

En route to the Bahamas, where the duke will take over his post as governor and commander-in-chief, the famous couple will make the trip aboard the 9,359-ton cargo liner with Maj. Gray Phillips, the duke's secretary, and his two aides de camp, Capt. George Wood and Capt. Vyvyan Drury.

None of their household staff is expected to travel with the duke and duchess.

For the man who renounced kingdom and empire for "the woman I love," the trip will be in strange contrast to his previous visits to the United States — in 1919, when he went there as official good will ambassador and was greeted with one of Broadway's first post-war showers of ticker tape, and in 1924 when, as now, he traveled "incognito" and, for a formal visit to President Coolidge, devoted all of his time to making the rounds of gay social functions on Long Island and elsewhere.

Also sailing on the Excalibur will be William Phillips, U. S. ambassador to Rome, who is going home for a brief vacation; Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., U. S. ambassador to Poland; John Cudahy, ambassador to Belgium, and George Gordon, minister to the Netherlands. Most of the other passengers will be war refugees of various nationalities.

(In London, the press published without comment the statement by U. S. Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles that it would be a violation of American neutrality law for British warships to convoy the Excalibur.

(It was assumed, however, that British warships in the Atlantic would keep a long-distance watch on the Windsors' passage without infringing on American neutrality and would be ready to prevent any enemy coup that might damage the prestige of British sea power.

(London papers made front-page news of the Windsors' preparations for departure and of the report attributed to the duchess' friends in New York that she is to undergo plastic surgery in the United States.)

Brief Career as Bad Man Results In Bullet Death

BOISE, Idaho—(U.P.)—Pearl Royal Hendrickson's few, violent hours as a bad man ended late yesterday in an ambulance where he died of a dozen bullet wounds.

The 50-year-old colored war veteran shot down U. S. Marshal George Meefan and Deputy Marshal John Glenn with his 30-30 rifle. Glenn had tried to evict him from a worthless mining claim.

State police and federal bureau of investigation agents surrounded his cabin, poured into it for three hours a steady hail of rifle, shotgun and sub-machine gun slugs. Hendrickson was hit, but he fired back. Finally, the shack was fired by incendiary machine gun bullets and officers dragged the choking, dying man out.

TIMELY ALARM

HAMILTON, Mont.—(AP)—Dr. R. A. Cooley's automobile sounded its own fire alarm enabling him to save his home from the flames.

Awakened by the persistent honking of an automobile horn, Cooley realized it came from his garage adjoining the house. He found the machine in flames but fireman were able to pull it outside before his residence caught fire. Apparently the short circuit which set the car afire also touched off the horn.

Draft Reduction Fails to Halt Opposition

Up and Down the Street

When the heat wave ended yesterday it signalled the beginning of a lot of dishwashing for a Mansfield woman who thought it was too hot last week to do the dishes. Her friends said today that figuring that the heat probably would end in a day or two, anyway, she started letting the dishes pile up in the sink. When the heat wave continued, however, she was afraid she'd have to discard her resolution or buy some more dishes. It ended just in time.

Every dog has his day and maybe some of these days Skippy, mascot at county jail, will have his, just to make up for all the embarrassment he has suffered recently. Skippy, whom Sheriff E. P. Long rescued from an auto wreck when he was just a puppy and who has grown up at the county bastile, was missing yesterday all day. Late in the afternoon he came in all bedecked in a bright red collar. The gaudy attire was too much for Skippy and he hung his head and tail in shame and sneaked out, hoping to avoid observation. It was the second time he had come home thus decorated. Once he came home with a red ribbon bow on his harness, and he didn't get over the shame of it for days. Neither the sheriff nor his deputies can find out who puts the fancy decorations on Skippy.

BUDGET BOARD MEETS MONDAY

County Commission to Act on Fund Requests Made By 41 Subdivisions.

The Richland county budget commission will hold its annual organization session at 8 a. m. Monday at the courthouse and will start work on the 1941 county, municipal, school and township budgets, County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe said today.

Only Perry and Bloominggrove townships of the 41 subdivisions in the county had failed to submit their budget drafts today, the auditor said. The budgets were due July 20.

There is no penalty for failing to submit them on time, but approval of tax rates and budgets for next year will be held up until all of the drafts are in, Wolfe said.

The commission, which includes the county auditor, treasurer and prosecutor, will set up preliminary tax rates to provide operating and debt retirement funds for the subdivisions next year. The proposed rates and revised budgets will be returned to the subdivisions for approval and then submitted to the state tax commission.

Wolfe said the entire process of getting local government units to adjust their requests to meet the prospective income for 1941 and obtaining approval of the new tax rates by the state probably will be completed about Sept. 1.

Between that time and the first of next year, operating and debt appropriations for the county, cities, villages, schools and townships will be set up.

ASKS FUNDS FOR MORE BICYCLE TAGS; START ISSUING TOMORROW

While police prepared today to issue the first bicycle licences, Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton said he would ask council for additional funds for the purchase of 1,000 more tags.

Crafton said today that the first order of 1,000 license tags, which will go on sale tomorrow, would be inadequate to fill applications and that he would ask council Tuesday night to authorize the purchase of additional tags.

He said that $150 would be needed to buy approximately 1,500 more licenses.

The funds are appropriated by council from the general fund, the receipts from the tags which sell for 25 cents being turned back into the fund.

The first license plates will be issued tomorrow and Saturday between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m. at police headquarters to children of the Carpenter school district. On Wednesday and Thursday of next week they will be issued to children of the Western avenue school district.

Sale to other districts will be announced later, Police Chief Meade K. Bates said.

SEE ADOPTION OF GUARDSMEN TRAINING BILL

Senate Gets House-Approved Measure Boosting Funds For Preparedness.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Sharp curtailment of military registration plans failed today to win over leading senate opponents of conscription.

Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.) declared that action of the senate military committee in voting to limit registration to men between 21 and 30, inclusive, did not alter his objections to the compulsory training program.

The original Burke-Wadsworth bill called for registration of all men between 18 and 64, with only those between 21 and 30 likely to come under an immediate selective draft.

Wheeler said, however, that he would not oppose legislation authorizing the president to call out the national guard and the officers' reserve corps for a year's intensive training.

Democratic Leader Barkley decided to take up that bill in the senate this afternoon. There was every advance indication that it would encounter little opposition.

While senators were deep in debate over manpower, they received from the house a quickly-approved bill adding $4,963,151,957 to the vast preparedness fund. The money, asked by President Roosevelt, would begin work on the proposed "two-ocean navy," provide 14,394 more army and navy planes, and purchase equipment for 2,000,000 soldiers.

Of the total, $2,234,191,957 was in direct appropriations which can be expended during this fiscal year, and the remainder was for contract authorizations.

Passed with little criticism in a listless two-hour session, the bill was one of the largest—if not the largest—appropriation measures ever approved by the house. If the senate agrees, its enactment will boost defense funds for this session to $10,040,225,543.

The unanimous decision of the senate military committee to narrow the registration age limits was taken in the face of growing congressional opinion of the conscription bill.

There were indications that the house military committee would follow the senate group in requiring registration only for men from 21 to 30, inclusive.

Ohio National Guardsmen Take Exams For Higher Rank.

You Can't Print That!

(This is a compendium of tales that can't be told with names, because they're too true to print. If there is in the characters any resemblance to actual persons—living or dead—you've probably guessed right.)

Sally X. is a cute girl singer on the crest of the popularity wave. She sings with a band that has become popular since she became a household word—and simply because of her. The vogue for her odd style of singing has skyrocketed the crew that plays her music to national prominence, although everyone knows that without her they'd still be playing dance music in second-rate hotels.

These days you see Sally's name coupled with that of Johnny Z., who leads the band. And for once the gossip writers aren't wrong or at any rate they're only 30 per cent wrong. Because Sally does love Johnny, and in a way Johnny loves Sally.

But the columnists, up to now, haven't noticed that wherever Johnny and Sally goes, his mother goes along. Even when the band is on the move his mother goes along and makes the one-night stands.

Johnny's very devoted to his mother. And that's why, although Sally would be glad to resign from the top rung of the ladder and just be Johnnie's wife, she hasn't got a chance—because Johnny has vowed never to marry while his mother lives!

But you can't print that. The jitterbugs would rather think of Sally and Johnny as a pair of romantic lovers en route to the altar.

Anne A. is a Hollywood writer. Recently she was assigned to the motion picture reviews on her west coast paper, and in a short time she became one of California's more important dishers of Hollywood dirt. It's legend that plenty of film exhibitors read her stories and decided whether or not a picture's worth having, so naturally the studios are eager to make Anne happy.

And nobody can say her reviews aren't completely fair and honest. She refuses to be influenced by anything but her own true opinion. So there's really only one thing in her writing that leaves her open to criticism: She keeps campaigning against English actors, giving them bad notices and writing that 'audiences would rather see American talent than British any day.

She doesn't really mean it quite that way. What she means is that she was engaged a few years ago to an English actor who suddenly eloped with an English actress without so much as saying toodle-oo to Anne.

But you can't print that. It would be so mean to expose her little revenge for a broken heart.

Philip O. is a middle-aged man, miserable in health but rolling in money. Jane D. is his actress wife—very ambitious, very lovely, and very much too young to be married to him. (The papers said 19—but she's really only 18.) Of course their friends were amazed by the marriage. Because anyone who knows Philip knows that he's carrying an unquenchable torch for a famous glamor girl who died almost on the eve of their marriage. And it's an open secret that Jane was—and still is—desperately in love wth a young fellow who acts for the camera lenses.

But what nobody will tell you (because nobody knows about it) is that before he eloped with Jane, the ailing Philip had a conference with the girl, her parents and her true love. He wanted to marry Jane, he explained, but it would be more an adoption than a marriage. He had about two years to live, she had scores. He pointed out that marrying him would be like taking out an annuity, because he would finance her career and then when he died she would be his wealthy widow.

So the parents said "yes," and so did Jane, and so did her "true heart," who doesn't even need the money!

But you can't print that. Those things don't happen, even in the most fictional movies, do they?

Rita A. was one of the most fabulous of the glorified Ziegfeld girls. Even on a stage rampant with beauties, you noticed her first, and most often, and you remembered her beauty longest. Years later, looking at an old theater program or just thinking of lovely women, you might have wondered what ever became of her.

Looking at the record of her many marriages to millionaires, you'd guess that she'd never have a thing to worry about—but you'd guess wrong. For years now, Rita has eked out a bare existence as hostess in the more dismal night clubs around Chicago, and the least grim thing about her battle with adversity has been her fine courage.

The millionaires are all divorced, of course. And about a year ago, an accident robbed Rita of her health just as the years had robbed her of her beauty. For seven months she has been bedridden and destitute. It took a lot of pain to make her swallow her pride and appeal to an organization (fostered by many of her former friends) for enough money to pay for medicine so she could go back to her dismal work. And she's the kind, too, who would have paid the money back, in time.

But her benevolent pals wrote her a very formal letter telling her that if she went on relief they'd try to add a few dollars to whatever the authorities saw fit to give her.

But you can't print that. It might put a damper on the swank ball that same organization is giving ostensibly to aid just such girls as Rita.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Aben Kandel is the city slicker of the movie lots.

Hand a producer a story about a metropolis, and the odds are he'll think of Kandel for the treatment. That's because Kandel wrote a book called "City for Conquest" and it's being made into a movie.

Kandel is a stocky, vigorous, black-haired fellow who laughs at himself as frequently as not and writes upstanding, vigorous prose poetry about skyscrapers and slums, steaming streets and alleys, and the people who live in or around them. His city, of course, is New York.

He knows other cities, too, and the hinterlands. He knows Alaska. He worked there on a geodetic survey boat, and in a gold mine, until he tired of it and went to Seattle for a newspaper job. That was fine until he got tired of the rain (Seattle was having unusual weather, naturally) and the chief, Ted Cook, heeded his complaint and sent him off to a Spokane paper, which he liked better. He did a journalistic trick in Los Angeles, too, and made it locale of his "Rabbi Burns."

But Kandel's city is New York, and he comes to Hollywood only occasionally to do a treatment or a screenplay. He says he would rather do this to the stories of other writers, because on his own he runs the risk of becoming emotionally involved, which interferes with his primary business of novel-writing. He is contributing dialogue to his "City for Conquest."

He was born in Rumania. His family—"a long line of dentists and gypsies"—brought him to New York when he was two years old. The city always fascinated him. He learned it by heart, at all hours of day and night, its sounds, sights, smells, music, people. He has worked there, and been flat broke (there and elsewhere) exactly 11 times. He hasn't been broke lately.

Kandel planned "City for Conquest" as a book in which the main character would be the city itself; a book with no personal villains, a book in which people did what they did under the spur of city-fostered ambition. The book took hold, despite rave reviews, rather slowly. Columbia bought it for pictures, never got around to making it. Directors and producers, as they read it, clamored for the rights. James Cagney read it. Cagney's brother Bill read it too. The Cagneys together talked Warner bosses into buying the rights. So now Jimmy is starring in it with Ann Sheridan, and Bill is producing.

As for Kandel, he has finished a treatment on Elmer Rice's play, "Two On an Island," for R-K-O.

FIRST AUGUST BRIDE WEDDED EARLY TODAY

Miss Stella Mary Disanze, Donald Anthony Quinn Exchange Nuptial Vows Before Altar of St. Peter's Church.

HEADING the August nuptial parade was the marriage at 9:30 o'clock this morning of Miss Stella Mary Disanze, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Disanze, 560 South Main street, and Donald Anthony Quinn, Salem, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Quinn, Salem. The formal ceremony was performed by Msgr. R. C. Goebel before the altar of St. Peter's Catholic church.

In addition to the bank of palms and ferns used on the altar there were two beauty baskets of pink gladioli and two large bouquets of the same flowers. Large bows of white satin ribbon, and streamers of the ribbon along the center aisle marked the pews.

Preceding the ceremony Raymond Baum, church organist, played "Cavatina" by Carl Bohn. The processional was "Grand Triumphal Chorus" by Alexander Guilmant. The mass music was from the 16th century Gregorian chant, and the offertory was "Sancta Maria," a hymn to the blessed virgin, while the communion selection was "Melody In G" by Guilmant, and the recessional was "Wedding March" by Theodore Stern.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attired in a gown of paper white slipper satin made with a full circular skirt which ended in a slight train. The squared neckline was caught with two pearl clips. Miss Disanze wore a veil made in the circular virgin style falling to a fingertip length in back. This was attached to a beaded tiara. She carried a semi-colonial bouquet of gardenias, pink roses, blue delphinium and swansonia tied with white satin.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mary G. Disanze, who was attired in a blush rose frock made with a double net skirt in the drindl style. It was designed similarly to the bride's, the neck being trimmed with French blue velvet ribbon ending in streamers down the front. Heart-shaped pockets trimmed with matching ribbon completed the frock with which the maid of honor wore a large picture hat of hair braid trimmed with the same ribbon.

She carried a semi-colonial bouquet of pink roses, pink and blue delphinium and pink asters tied with blue ribbon.

Cousins Usher.

Louis Anthony Quinn, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Joseph Chillemi and James Augustine, cousins of the bride, served as ushers.

Trip to Conneaut.

Later tonight the couple will depart for a wedding trip at Conneaut Lake, Pa. They will be at home after Aug. 5 at 817 Summit street, Salem. The bride attended Mansfield Senior high school. Her husband attended Salem high school and La Salle university at Chicago, Ill. He is now an engineering clerk.

Among the guests attending the wedding were Louis and Betty Quinn, brother and sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Joseph Colian, Ambridge, Pa., and Pete Fianni, Salem.

Had to Grab Something When Dizzy Spells Came Over Her
Mansfield Resident Suffered from Constipation, Upset Stomach, Quivering Nerves, and Other Troubles Due to Constipation. Until Vendol Brought Gratifying Relief.

MRS. EFFIE RUHL
"When I began taking Vendol a few weeks ago I was terribly constipated, and this condition often made me feel so dizzy that sometimes I felt like I might fall unless I held something to steady myself till it passed off, but Vendol gave the most satisfying relief from constipation, so I haven't had a dizzy spell lately," declared Mrs. Effie Ruhl of 22½ South Main street, Mansfield.
"In addition to the above, I often had spots dancing before my eyes, and if I stooped over seemed blood would rush to my head, and most every morning I'd awaken with a headache, tongue coated, and a vile taste in my mouth. My skin had a dull, lifeless color.
"Vendol proved wonderful for me. The relief it gave from constipation was amazing; then the other troubles grew less and less till now I'm truly feeling better than in many a day, never a sign of dizziness, get restful sleep, tongue cleared off, and my skin has a healthy look. Vendol is grand medicine, and I hope my experience with it will lead many sufferers to give it a trial."
Vendol is sold by most all leading druggists here and is especially recommended by Central Drug store, corner Main and Fourth streets.

Youth Needs Places to Gather

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

This column has often mentioned the church in Baltimore which seems to demonstrate that its leaders know something about human nature, realizing, among other things, that love is the second strongest hunger in normal people.

This church has a community room, library, and kitchen where young people may meet, cook their suppers, have guests. They may dance in the community room, play the piano, see moving pictures, hear excellent talks on timely and cultural subjects, all under capable adult supervision.

In spite of its millions of club women, churches, and well-meaning organizations, it's a sad aspect of city life in these United States that we are apparently indifferent to youth and its problems. There are so few places where self-supporting boys and girls, and those who ask no greater favor than to be self-supporting, can meet in decent surroundings. They are obliged to go to dime-a-dance halls and similar hangouts where they are preyed upon by the undesirables of both sexes. I've had hundreds of letters about such places, but we club-conscious women seem to do nothing about it.

Minneapolis seems to be following Baltimore in having a place where respectable young men and women can meet and have a good time with no stigma attached. The City Youth Club, formally opened in the middle of July, was the inspiration of a young man, Cletus Montague, who knew what boys and girls of his own age wanted. No roadhouses or dime-a-dance joints was the verdict of these self-respecting young citizens.

Fortunately, the state president of the Federated Women's Club, Mrs. L. R. Upham, and her educational chairman, Mrs. Frank Warren, with real vision saw that getting this club on its feet was far more important than the things about which clubwomen usually busy themselves. These women put their shoulders to the wheel with the result that the City Youth Club is to be a major federation project this year.

They've renovated a nice old dwelling. It will be open every day and evening to young people from 18 to 26, for an annual fee of $1.50, and the young people are flocking there like bees to a peach orchard in blossom.

Apropos of the necessity of such clubs, a state Parent-Teacher Association, which recently met at College Park, Maryland, brought out the statement from Roy Breg, Executive Secretary of Allied Youth, that 49 per cent of our high school seniors have begun to drink. He said: "Alcohol is one of the major problems in America." Certain sessions were set aside for the consideration of the problem of alcohol in high schools.

If we are going to do anything about the alcohol problem of our public schools, here's the chance for club women to follow in the wake of Baltimore and Minneapolis in having some decent place for self-respecting youngsters to meet and enjoy—yes, I'm going to use an habitually snooted line —"good clean fun." It's the lack of such places as these youth clubs which make so many of our young people fall victims to subversive influences.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 23 years old. About a year and a half ago a boy, Jack, with whom I had been going "steady" for two years broke off with me rather suddenly. I made up my mind I'd forget about him, although I was deeply in love. I started dating and had all the dates I wanted.

I started going with Ted. He says he loves me and wants to go "steady." But I can't get my mind off Jack. Ted comes from a fine family, has a good job, but I'd rather face hardships with Jack than a life of luxury with anyone else. Jack says he'll always love me, but right now would rather go around with the boys. He doesn't seem to care for girls, so I know that isn't his reason.

We had really planned to marry, and now it seems as if everything is over. How can I get over loving Jack? I'd like it better still if you could tell me how to get him back.

CONNIE.

In this great game of loving and falling in love, as in medicine, there is what is known as the counter-irritant treatment. In love this means deliberately fastening your attention on someone other than the one you wish to forget. Force yourself to take an interest in Ted rather than accept the excuse of a boy who says he will always love you but prefers the society of other young men of his own age. That's not the most promising type on which to waste your affection.

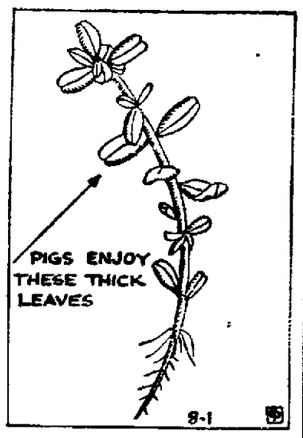
Garden Graph

By QEAN HALLIDAY



A WEED OF MANY NAMES

Purslane, pursley or pussley, whatever name you call it, this weed of many names continues to be one of the most persistent of garden pests. Yet it was once grown as a salad plant and pot herb. Today it is only considered good for pig food. Pigs love its thick, juicy leaves.

A close-up of this weed is shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph so that gardeners can identify it even if they do not know which name to give it. This weed bears yellow flowers which only open, however, on sunny mornings. The weed is low-growing in habit and is an annual which develops rapidly once it makes it appearance. The reddish, fleshy stems root at the joints when they are incontact with the soil.

If you are aware of the presence of this weed get rid of it before it goes to seed, for the seeds have unusually long-keeping qualities. The weed can best be controlled by hand-pulling it when the ground is moist.

Marriage Meddlers

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"Your father must fear some very special activity from the gang he is fighting," she said.

"He does," I agreed, "but I do not think we need fear the triumph of the other side. There may be bloodshed—for there are desperate men on one side, equally determined law enforcers on the other. But—I have seen my father in action many times—and —I never have known his plans to fail, nor have I known any person and property confided to his care to be harmed. But—he sets up the most elaborate precautions—which he expects to be obeyed meticulously."

"I shall be his most obedient servant," she said with a smile, then as we neared her door, she suddenly drew me into a little alcove of the hall, out of sight not only of her door but of anyone coming along the hall, and put her hands upon my shoulders.

"You are the only one to whom I can speak, my dear Madge," she said, "but I want you to know the great happiness you have brought me tonight in the restoration of my jewels."

"I have brought you?" I said in genuine amazement, but putting my arms tightly around her, for I felt intuitively that it was a woman, not a queen, who needed the warm, loving sympathy of a sister. "You mean my father, don't you?"

"Partly, of course," she said, "but mostly I mean you. I do not need to be told that you and Lillian played some vital part in the recovery of the jewels, and I do not wish you to betray any confidence by telling me what that part was. My intuition is satisfied on that score. But on another count, reason backs intuition. I am certain that your father would never have told me about the return of the jewels had you not assured him that I would keep any promise I made. You made yourself a sort of hostage for me. I am as sure of it as if I had heard your colloquy—and—I am deeply grateful."

She stooped and kissed me warmly, and then, without asking or waiting for a reply from me, she turned toward her own door, drawing me with her.

"Come in!" Olina said with a lilting note in her voice, and as I looked from her vividly animated face and sparkling eyes to Lillian's "poker map," as Dicky calls it, I realized that instead of heckling Olina, Lillian had been exercising all her charm upon her, and when Lillian exerts all her fascination upon any person, man or woman, her friendly charm is irresistible.

Olina drew a chair for me opposite the one in which her mother usually sits, but I shook my head.

Hastily I explained to her and to Lillian the precautions my father wished us to take until the danger from Jack Leslie and his gang should be over. Then we four went to work, and when he had finished we were confident that no matter how strong the light inside the room, no glimmer of it could reach the outside of the house through the windows we had just shrouded.

HOROSCOPE

For Friday, Aug. 2.

Very lively and progressive conditions prevail on this day, according to the lunar and mutual aspects. New matters are uppermost and may take sudden and surprising turns for unforeseen advantage. Such opportunities should be grasped with vim and decisiveness, urged on to satisfactory conclusions.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which all important affairs dart ahead on swift wings, urged on by certain peculiar, unfathomable and surprising as well as thrilling elements. New interests, plans and contacts keep things "on the jump" physically as well as intellectually.

A child born on this day should be magnificently endowed with qualities for notable achievements and important position in life, probably in the arts, sciences or professions. Keen intellect, adaptability, energy, are backed up or inspired by subtle genius.

Directions For Home Manicure

By MME. QUI VIVE

If we could be like the little girl in the poem who "sat on a cushion and sewed a fine seam, lived on strawberries, sugar and cream," we'd have no trouble with fingernails. The pretty pink shells would take care of themselves. What with driving cars, doing housework, working in gardens or thumping typewriters we can't expect them to keep in form When housework is done it is pretty rough going for them. In and out of water, the hands are robbed of the natural lubricant, nails become filmed, losing their mirror-like shimmer.

There are times when something has to be done about them and there's no chance to hippity hop to the beauty shop. Then the manicure kit has to be hauled out, an emergency treatment given. If a girl has the proper instrument and knows the program, she can give herself a fairly decent manicure. It won't be up to professional attentions, but it will pass for the time being.

She usually makes the mistake of soaking the hands in soapy water right at the start. If that is done the nails will be too soft for quick filing. Shaping begins with the flexible metal file, swept from sides to center. It does not cut a tough inner substance which must be removed with a beveling file or emery board.

After the filing comes a thorough scrubbing with warm soapy water and a brush. Pass the orangewood stitck under the nail eaves, forming clear outlines.

Touch the nails of the left hand with cuticle cream. If the jar has gone dry you can use olive oil. Sending the orangewood stick around in tiny circles gently detaches the cuticle from the nail. When it is free you should be able to pass the stick from one end of the eave to the other. Don't force the cuticle down at the base; you are likely to injure the matrix and the new nail will appear with ridges or white spots.

After this treatment you may find that you've dug up some little shags here and there. Snip them away with the needle-point scissors. When you buy scissors do not economize. Only high grade steel will cut quickly and neatly. Once a year the scissors should be sharpened. This work is done at stores that deal in barber's supplies.

Every bit of cream or oil must be washed away or the polish film will be patchy. Use soapy water again and the brush, follow with a rinsing with tepid water. Dry thoroughly.

Apply the liquid veneer by placing the brush at the nail base, sweeping toward the end. Let the first light application dry, then put on another one. If the nails are short and wide, tint clear to the tips to make them look longer.

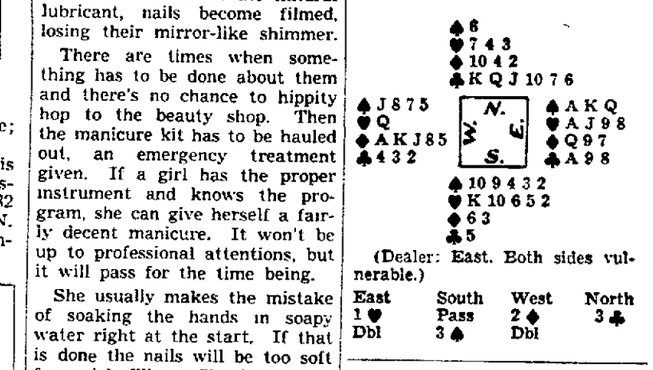
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T TRY TO HELP HIM

Some of the biggest sets ever scored are the result of one partner trying to rescue the other from a hostile business double. Frequently the effort amounts to jumping from the frying pan into the fire, or worse. Often it happens that the player who "stuck his neck out" with an interrupting bid would have been beaten a moderate amount for a profitable sacrifice, whereas the rescue into another suit brings a calamitous loss.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♦	3 ♣
Dbl	3 ♠	Dbl

What happened here was a caution. The singleton heart Q was led to the A, a heart ruffed by West's 5, the diamond K and A taken and a third diamond ruffed by South's spade 2. Then the club 5 and K fell to the A, followed by the now good heart J for a club discard by West. The next heart was trumped by West's 7 and the club 4 led to the Q. The club J then was ruffed by the spade J, making the hand down four to that point. Whereupon East did something you probably never in your life will see a defender do—laid down the three top trumps for the last three tricks.

All told, the contract was down seven tricks, giving East and West a score of 2,000 points. If South had properly left North's 3-Club contract in the lap of the gods, the side would have been set three for four tricks at the most, for a score of 1,100 or 1,400, which would have been a profitable result, since East and West can make 6-No Trumps, as the cards lay, worth 1,440 points.

There is just one real point to this hand, however. When your partner injects himself into a series of constructive bidding by the opponents, his hand may not be so bad at that suit, but is likely to be terrible at any other declaration. Let him alone then, unless you have something real on which to bid or possess a clear inference that his hand fits your suit.

Tomorrow's Lesson.

Against a lead of the club 3, how should South play to make 7-Clubs?

Crack Softball Combines Open City Series Today

Touted Hermans, All-Stars Meet At Liberty Park

Fullager and McKinley Expected to Clash In Mound Duel In Initial Tilt.

By CHARLES MARTIN, News-Journal Sports Editor.

THE Mansfield Wrecking Company All-Star moundsman who draws the starting assignment against the unbeaten Sons of Herman in the opening game of the series for the city championship at 6 p. m. today at Liberty park faces a difficult task.

A glance at the impressive batting averages of the Hermans should make almost any pitcher shudder when he faces them as four of the players are hitting the ball at better than a .400 clip.

Harry Ross, third baseman, George Hummel, outfielder, Ed Henrich, first baseman, and Frank Balbaugh, rover, are the Hermans' leading batters and any one of them is capable of breaking up a close ball game with a lusty home run.

Dale McKinley, Bob Lapine or "Stub" Winebrenner—will have a tough time.

What strategy Nick Wagner, All-Star's pilot, will employ to try and halt the hitters remains to be seen.

Four other regulars are smacking the ball over the .300 mark and whoever faces them—

While the Hermans, who will be after their 15th straight triumph, hold a slight edge in the hitting department, the Wreckers' crack squad also possesses dangerous sluggers.

Probably the best of the 20-player team are Al Stickler, the club's captain, Nick Weber, Tom Farrel, Bob Boyd, Bob Woerth and Garner Judy. These lads have been the star hitters in the Y. M. C. A. leagues and they may be just as tough against the Herman's ace moundsmen.

With Jim Fullager likely to handle the mound duties for the Hermans, the club will enter the series as favorites. Should Wagner's outfit win the first game, followers of the All-Stars figure their team will have an even chance of winning the championship and the trophy.

PROBABLE LINEUPS

Hermans	Pos.	All-Stars
Fullager	P	McKinley

Henrich	1B	Woerth
Beery	2B	Horvath
Ross	3B	Yarman

Balbaugh	R	Stickler
Hummel	LF	Judy
Moxley	CF	Hallabrin
Stout	RF	Kinney

Wagner is still withholding the name of his starting pitcher at noon today, but indicated that the one with the most votes—McKinley of the Alta Lumbers may toe the rubber. The All-Stars' pilot stated late yesterday following the practice session at Liberty park that he believes he'll start the high-vote man at every position.

If that is true the All-Stars will line up like this: McKinley, pitcher; Henshaw, Wreckers, catcher; Woerth, Alta Lumbers, first; Mike Horvath, Tinkey Lumbers, second, Gene Yarman, Safety Cabs, third; Weber, Wreckers, short stop; Stickler, Wreckers', rover; Judy, Safety Cabs, left field; John Hallabrin, Safety Cabs, center; and Al Kinney, Alta Lumbers, right.

There is no admission charge for the games, but officials of both teams hope the collection taken up during the contests will be enough to pay for the 14½ inch trophy and a banquet for the players of both teams.

John Gross will be behind the plate today with Bill Donnellan on the bases.

Oliver Wins an Open After All

Deprived of a possible chance to win the National Open golf tourney at Cleveland when he tied but was disqualified by the officials, Ed Oliver of Hornell, N. Y., comes through with a victory in the rich St. Paul open at St. Paul, Minn. Ed, who took down $1,500 in prize money, is shown right, with his brother, Harry, after his victory.

Moose Lodge Marks Up 11th Straight Win

WHEN the Moose lodge softball team enters a league they make sure, right from the start, that nobody else gives them too much competition.

They accomplish this feat by the simple process of not letting any other team in the league win a game from them. Last night they rolled up their 11th straight victory in the Y. M. C. A. Commercial league by handing the tough Nick's Place combination a 9 to 6 defeat.

Francis Brown, who hurled for the Moosemen, allowed the Nicks only six hits, while his teammates proceeded to pound Warren Gross, one of Mansfield's top-notch pitchers, for 16 hits.

Schmidt, Moose centerfielder, walked off with the batting honors by smashing out four hits out of five trips to the batter's box. Hostetter, Nick leftfielder, led the Nicks with two hits out of four journeys.

Kunz, who holds down first base for the Moosemen, blasted out the only homer of the contest.

The Moose scored once in the first frame, five times in the third, twice in the fifth, and once in the seventh for their nine-run total.

In two other Commercial League tilts last night, the Kobackers outfit outpointed the Service Taxis, 8 to 4, and the Town Taverns edged the Isaly club 5 to 4.

Junior Olympics Open At County Fair Friday

THE stage was set today for the opening tomorrow of the Richland county fair's Junior Olympics, athletic carnival of track and field events in which more than 500 boys and girls are expected to compete.

* * *

Don Cram, physical director of the Y. M. C. A. who is directing the Olympics in cooperation with the fair board, said today that all events will take place on the baseball field during the morning. Preliminary events will be run off tomorrow morning and finals will be held on Saturday morning.

The Olympics are being held in conjunction with two special children's days being sponsored by the fair board. Both are all-day affairs starting with the Olympics at 9 a. m. each morning and concluding with the afternoon performances of grandstand shows to which children will be admitted for 10 cents. Ample picnic space is on the grounds for children bringing their lunches.

Cram and his staff of assistants were busy today getting the baseball field in shape for the various athletic events. These will include running races, bicycle races of various kinds, and field events such as broad jump, shot put and other events of that nature.

Ribbons will be awarded to winners in the preliminary rounds Friday and cash prizes will be awarded winners in the final events Saturday.

A relay race starting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel at 8.30 a. m. and proceeding to the fairground will open the Olympics Friday. Mayor W. J. Locke will serve as the starter.

REPORT AT 9 A. M.

All boys and girls attending the Junior Olympics either as spectators or participants will report at the baseball field in the fairground at 9 a. m. Friday and Saturday, two days on which the Olympics will be held. Don Cram, director, said that registration of participants will take place at that time.

Error Gives Auditors Win

Ashland Softball Combine Drops 1-0 Decision.

An error by Rightfielder Gardner enabled the Ferguson State Auditors to tally a run in the sixth inning and hand the Ashland All-Star softball combine a 1 to 0 defeat before some 3,000 spectators here at Brookside park yesterday.

With two out in the sixth, Gardner dropped a fly ball and allowed a runner to score from third base.

Bodner's baffling slow ball readily handcuffed the touted Auditors, and outside of the sixth when he gave up a walk he was never in serious trouble.

Mike limited the winners to five hits while his teammates were pounding Frank Solt for eight—but the Ashlanders couldn't produce runs with runners on the paths.

Ashland placed men on bases in all but four innings. The crowd is one of the largest ever to witness a softball contest in this city.

Junior Team Invades Canton

Dewey Durant's Youngsters Face Marion Today.

CANTON—Manager Dewey Durant and his McVey Post, American Legion Junior baseball club are here today to clash with Marion in an opening game of the Junior tournament.

The victory string of the Warren American Legion Junior baseball team stood at 16 today after a surprising 9 to 3 defeat of the defending champion Louisville club in the first round of the state Legion tournament.

Displaying power at the plate, Warren clubbed out a total of 13 hits off two Louisville pitchers. Five of the blows came in the seventh inning to account for five runs.

Warren meets Zanesville in a second round game today, while Springfield plays Lima, Portsmouth tackles Middletown, and Mansfield takes on Marion.

Marvin Oligee turned in a one-hit pitching performance for Middletown yesterday to blank Logan, 9 to 0. Lima whipped Toledo, 6 to 2, with five of the victors' runs coming in the fourth inning.

Semi-finals will be played Friday and finals Saturday.

With George Laurila hurling seven-hit ball and Gene Woodling starring at the plate, the Braves, who were trailing by a 4 to 3 count when they went into the eighth, pounded out 12 bingles.

Mighty Homer Helps Keltner Out of Slump

Ken Collects Wallop With Bases Loaded as Tribe Trips Red Sox, 12 to 11.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Ken Keltner, Cleveland Indians' third baseman, isn't convinced he's out of his protracted batting slump, but fans were ready to concede he shook it off with one mighty blow.

Keltner blasted a four-run homer in the fourth inning of yesterday's battle of the pitchers—10 of them—to put the Indians back in the game after the Boston Red Sox took a seven-run lead, and started the Tribe toward a 12 to 11 victory.

He shared honors with Russ Peters whose pinch single in the eighth inning with two men out and the bases loaded snatched the ball game out of the lost column by scoring the tying and winning runs. The victory kept Cleveland in a tie with Detroit for first place.

Keltner got four hits, including the circuit smash and a double, in five times at bat and admitted his timing was improved and his hitting harder but—

"I'll wait until my batting average is above the .300 mark before admitting that I'm back in stride at the plate," he said.

Currently he is 12th in batting

Brooklyn's Predicament Blamed on Bad Pitching

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK—(INS)—Opportunity may knock a dozen times for a major league baseball club, but if it is lacking in pitching more likely than not opportunity will wear its knuckles bare without response, and that may be the predicament that the Brooklyn Dodgers and opportunity are in today.

* * *

With the Cincinnati Reds idle, the Dodgers face the Pittsburgh Pirates in a double header that could prove extremely important in the National league pennant race—if the Dodgers could take the two games.

But the Dodgers probably will start young Ed Head, late of Elmira, a farm club, in one game and Whitlow Wyatt in the other. If Head doesn't go, then Lefty Lee Grissom will, and in either case the Pirates will begin with some kind of an edge over these two ineffectives, with the result that the Dodgers can't hope to improve their position over the idle Reds, who currently are out in front by 7½ games in the standings. All right then, the Dodgers can hope to do it, but they probably will fail.

While the Dodgers idled yesterday, the Reds blew a 4 to 1 lead to the New York Giants in the ninth inning of a night game and lost by 5 to 4, with Burgess Whitehead and Harry Danning belting climaxing home runs, depriving Bucky Walters of his 16th win of the season.

The St. Louis Cardinals moved up to within a few percentage points of the first division by completing a sweep of the series with the Boston Bees with a twin victory, 3 to 1 in 11 innings and 17 to 8, for a record of 17 wins in their last 21 starts.

In the one remaining National league game, the Philadelphia Phillies trounced the Chicago Cubs, 7 to 3, with the latter club suffering still more injuries. Augie Galan, outfielder, suffered a fractured left knee which probably will keep him out of the game for the rest of the season, the injury being the result of his crash into a concrete wall at Philadelphia. Manager-Catcher Gabby Hartnett was hit on the head by a bat and left the game.

In the American league, Detroit's Tigers kept pace with the Cleveland Indians at the top of the standings by downing the New York Yankees, 7 to 6, in 11 innings, while the Indians were downing the Boston Red Sox, 12 to 11.

* * *

The Washington Senators downed the St. Louis Browns, 13 to 5, and Philadelphia Athletics beat the Chicago White Sox, 4 to 3, in a night contest.

Homers Defeat Walters as He Seeks 16th Win

Whitehead, Danning Collect Circuit Clouts.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Now that it is out of their system, maybe the Cincinnati Reds can go ahead and win another ball game or two.

Bucky Walters was well on his way to his 16th victory of the year last night. The New York Giants came to their half of the ninth on the light end of a 4-1 score. Bucky was pitching in pretty fair style, though not at his best.

He got the first two Giants out, but—Bob Seeds drew Bucky's fourth pass of the evening and Burges Whitehead popped the ball into the short right field stands for a homer.

Then Bucky walked Mel Ott. He got two strikes on Harry Danning before that gentleman whacked the ball into the upper deck of the left field stands.

That was the end of Bucky, the ball game, and the Reds' hopes of stretching their first-place lead to 8½ games over the idle Brooklyn Dodgers. The score was 5 to 4, the Reds' ninth loss by one run.

A home run by Frank McCormick with one on in the first and Bill Werber's round tripper in the fifth gave the Reds an early start on Bill Lohrman, but they couldn't produce against him or his successor. Paul Dean, in the late innings. Dean was the winning pitcher.

The Reds move to Boston tomorrow for three doubleheaders. Whitey Moore and Jim Turner are the likely pitchers for the first.

Woodling, promising gardener, collected "four for four" last night and two of his hits were doubles. He drove in one run and scored two himself.

Mansfield tallied twice in the first and added a marker in the fourth, but Findlay, which dented the plate once in the first, forged ahead with three runs in the fifth. The Oilers held the advantage until the eighth.

Laurila issued five walks and struck out the same number and his teammates, although they committed three errors, supported him in tight spots by pulling off two double plays.

* * *

Stover and Dick Morse contributed two hits apiece to the attack. Incidentally, Woodling was the only player to secure extra base hits last night. Three Findlay players, Mazgay, Ruley and Huelsman paced the Oilers with two hits each.

KELTNER OUT OF SLUMP

among Cleveland players with an average of .246.

After the third sacker's homer, Cleveland scored a fifth run in the fourth on a walk, an infield out and a single by Pitcher Harry Eisenstat.

With Boston leading 11 to 5, Cleveland uncorked its second uprising in the seventh. The Tribe put together a walk, a double by Keltner and singles by Clarence Campbell, Ray Mack and Rollie Hemsley for three runs.

Then the Indians sewed up the slugfest with a four-run rally in the eighth. Roy Weatherly singled and scored on Hal Trosky's triple. A wild pitch by Joe Heving enabled Trosky to cross the plate. Keltner singled and Mack hit a double that bounced into the left field stands. Hemsley was passed, and Pinch Hitter Russ Peters singled in the two runs that meant victory.

Cleveland clubbed five Boston pitchers for 16 hits while the Red Sox reached as many Indian hurlers for only 10. Bill Zuber, who worked one inning, got credit for the victory.

Mel Harder, who has scored three of his six victories against Boston, was sent to the mound today as the Indians tried to sweep the series. Southpaw Fritz Ostermueller opposed him.

CAUSES BLACKOUT

GOLDENDALE, Wash. —(U.P.)— Residents of the south-central Washington city have an idea what Londoners have experienced during recent blackouts. All electricity was shut off when heavy ice formed on transmission lines and broke them. Emergency crews worked 19 hours before they were able to restore service.

Boys and girls two and three years old chose virtually the same toys, but girls show greater interest in drawing, painting and clay modeling.

SPOTTY PRICE TRENDS MARK STOCK TRADES

Bullish Sentiment Sustained By Brighter Aspect of Business News.

NEW YORK – It was another case of spotty price trends in today's stock market. Quiet strength crept in here and there but many leaders were unable to attract a following.

The brighter tone of business news, possibility of less armament taxation and a fair amount of political optimism, brokers said, helped sustain bullish sentiment.

Bonds and commodities shifted in varying directions.

Among the favored stocks were International Paper, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Sperry, Kennecott, Westinghouse, Du Pont and Eastman Kodak.

Paper corporation stocks were in the limelight as domestic paper concerns envisioned sizable earnings if the war continues to keep Scandinavian pulp supplies off the American market.

Building material company shares came in for further attention as the Engineering News-Record estimated construction awards for the week ended Tuesday at the fourth highest of the year to date, topping the preceding week by 71 per cent and the like period of a year ago by 89 per cent.

MANSFIELD NEWS IN BRIEF

Builds Home — A building permit for construction of a $3,250 home at 79 Massa avenue, was issued at city hall today to Ellsworth Hollingsworth, 126 Prospect street.

Answer Alarm — City firemen were called to the home of W. E. Druschel, 20 Helen avenue, at 9:24 p. m. yesterday when smoke was discovered in the residence. The incinerator was smoking, firemen said.

Auto Looted — Theft of two blankets and a pair of glasses from his automobile while it was parked on East Third street in front of his home last night was reported to police today by Charles Wirtz, 307½ East Third street.

Driver Fined — Pleading guilty in municipal court today to a charge of unsafe driving, Robert L. Hall, 156 Chilton avenue, was fined $10 and costs. He was arrested Monday and accused of driving 50 miles an hour on Marion avenue.

BOY, 15, HELD

Accused of Breaking Into Mansfield Residence.

A 15-year-old youth was ordered to appear before Judge C. J. Anderson in juvenile court tomorrow in connection with a house burglary yesterday.

Lieut. Paul Whipp and Patrolman John Gilbert arrested the youth at his Park avenue west home last night from descriptions given them by neighbors of Mrs. Clyde Jenkins, 13 Pleasant avenue, whose home he allegedly ransacked yesterday afternoon.

Officers said the youth admitted taking a screen from the front window of the house and entering the residence. He told the police he obtained 50 cents in change.

Lieut. Whipp said the youth denied that he had been connected in any way with a series of house breakings reported in the past month.

ed by flames from the telescoped car.

"We just came around the bend in the road," Lodge said, "when I saw the gas-electric loom up in front of us.

"We jammed on the brakes just as we hit, and there was a terrific explosion.

"Reynolds, the fireman, stayed with her through the fire and explosion until she came to a stop, then we jumped through a wall of flame that surrounded the whole wreckage.

"What we did just after that I don't remember."

It was 15 minutes before Cuyahoga Falls firemen brought the blaze under control, and some time after that before rescue workers could enter the coach. Gasoline from the car burned along the track, setting ties on fire, for an hour or more, endangering storage tanks of three nearby gasoline stations.

Ex-Mansfielder On Scene of Tragedy.

State Highway Patrolman L. D. Alexander, formerly stationed in Mansfield, was one of the first to arrive at the scene of the crash between a Pennsylvania freight train and a passenger coach in which 43 persons lost their lives yesterday at Cuyahoga Falls, near Akron. He sent out a call for ambulances and tried to get into the flaming coach but was driven back by the heat.

Alexander, off duty at the time and driving home after golfing, said the flaming mass in which the passengers died caused him to believe at first that the train had struck a gasoline truck.

NOT SURPRISED AT WHITE WALK

Observers Recall President Endorsed Bulkley Over Former Governor.

"whole-heartedly" in the 1932 and "with mental reservations" in 1936.

"As an American, believing in a free democracy, I cannot bring myself to vote for President Roosevelt for a third term," he continued.

"As a Jeffersonian Democrat I can and will vote for Wendell Willkie.

"If, in so doing, I am inconsistent with the vote of the Ohio delegation in the Chicago convention, I can only say that I hold conscience above consistency, especially after the manner in which the third term nomination was put over, and many other delegates feel the same way I do."

White was a member of the Ohio delegation to the Democratic national convention which cast its entire 52 votes for Roosevelt's renomination.

White was elected governor in 1930 and re-elected in 1932. He was defeated for re-nomination this year at the may 14 primary. He was made chairman of the Democratic national committee in 1920.

PASSENGERS IN COACH DIE IN RAIL DISASTER

Engineer Blamed for Deaths of 43 in Collision at Cuyahoga Falls.

the respective trains didn't know they were so close together. Railroad experts said that there were three alternatives: (1) That the Doodle-bug's engineer had failed to obey an order to take a siding; (2) That the chief engineer of the two locomotive freight train had not followed such an order; (3) That the order had been improperly drawn or had not been delivered. The investigation will decide which alternative is correct.

Less than half of the bodies had been identified. The gasoline tank of the Doodle-bug exploded at the instant of impact, spraying the wreckage and its cargo of dead and dying men, women, and children with flaming gasoline.

In consequence, most of the bodies were burned, some so badly that they never may be identified.

O. M. Lodge, chief engineer of the "double-header" freight train, saw the passenger coach rushing down the rails toward him at more than 40 miles an hour. He slammed on his brakes, and at the instant of impact his 74-car train, so heavy that two locomotives were needed to haul it, was traveling at approximately 35 miles an hour.

Thomas Murtaugh, 49, of Orrville, O., engineer of the Doodle-bug, was in a local hospital with a possible fractured skull, and could not be interviewed. Witnesses believe that he applied his brakes before he jumped from his car, just preceding the collision.

Harry B. Shaffer, 57, of Mount Vernon, O., the Doodle-bug's conductor, and Tod Wonn, 24, a railroad employe, jumped from the baggage compartment. Shaffer's right hand and right foot were amputated at the hospital later. Wonn received only scalp lacerations and a sprained foot.

"Shaffer looked ahead and said to me: 'We're going to hit. Jump.' And we both did."

The passengers, unable to see the freight train, never knew what hit them. County officials who were the first in the debris after the gasoline fire had burned itself out, said they found children smashed under the seats in which they had been sitting, men and women crammed back in their seats under the twisted steel of the front part of the coach which had been pushed back upon them.

The self-propelled coach was thrown 400 feet back from the huge freight locomotives and bits of it were scattered along the track. It was crumpled, like wadded paper, for almost half its length. The leading freight locomotive was not greatly damaged by comparison. The freight train was not even derailed.

The freight train was en route from Columbus to Cleveland and was running three hours late. Charles Howard, Pennsylvania railroad chief clerk at Cleveland, said the Doodle-bug had been ordered to take the siding at switch three, just north of the Cuyahoga Falls station. It had overrun this switch by a quarter of a mile.

E. R. Collier, conductor of the freight train, tapped his pocket and said it contained a written order notifying him that the Doodle-bug was taking the siding at switch three.

W. J. Payne, 45, of Akron, a salesman, had stopped his automobile there to wait for the freight train to pass. A piece of debris smashed through his car and hit his knee.

Ambulances gathered at the scene from neighboring communities within an hour, along with a vast fleet of private automobiles. But, with the exception of the three railroad employes and Payne, there was no one to take to the hospital. The ambulances were used instead to take the charred bodies to funeral homes.

Louise Stinaff, a local resident, was sitting on her front porch reading a newspaper, 150 yards from the scene.

"I heard a blast of whistles," she said, "and looked up to see two trains bearing down on each other with brakes screeching. Then there was a tremendous crash and explosion. I was stunned. A sheet of flame completely enveloped the Doodle-bug and the freight train pushed it 300 feet back along the track."

Her father, F. W. Stinaff, an old railroader, called police, the fire department, and the railroad dispatcher's tower at Akron. The passenger car's gasoline tank had a capacity of 600 gallons and it was believed to have contained at least 300 gallons.

Engineer Lodge of the freight train described the collision thus: "We had just come around the bend when I saw the Doodle-bug loom up in front of us. We jammed on the brakes. When we hit there was a terrific explosion. The fireman, (B. E. Reynolds) and I stayed with her through the fire and explosion until she came to a stop. Then we jumped through a wall of flame."

L. P. Seiler, fire chief of Cuyahoga Falls, arrived at the scene two minutes after the collision.

"Flames shot out of the windows, darted high in the air," he said. "The fire was like a screen and it was almost impossible to see what it was like inside the car.

"Then, for just a second, the wind parted the flames and I caught a glimpse of the interior. I was sure everybody in there was dead. They must have died almost instantly. I heard no screams at all.

"Some of the victims were hanging partly out of the windows and they were on fire. The freight train couldn't seem to stop and it kept pushing back the Doodle. Some of the burning bodies fell out of the windows and were strung out along the right of way. They were all shattered and bleeding and burnt.

"We couldn't do anything at first. Everything was so hot it was impossible to get near the car. We finally played three lines of water on the fire for 20 minutes before we could get inside the coach.

"The interior looked as if a tornado had hit it. All the seats were torn loose from their bases and were piled in a heap in the front part of the car. The same thing happened to most of the passengers. They were jammed to the ceiling at the forward end. We had to use acetylene torches to free some of the bodies. Most of them were so charred they couldn't be recognized."

The freight train was pushed onto one siding, the remains of the Doodle-bug on another. The rails were only slightly spread and four hours after the collision, traffic over the line was operating normally.

in organizing the Richland County chapter of the American Red Cross. She worked for weeks with a small group of men and women to organize a unit and the final organization meeting was held March 20, 1917, at the Chamber of Commerce room. She was elected first vice chairman of the chapter and later served as executive chairman. She remained on the board for many years and gave unsparingly of her time and energy during the World war relief work.

She also was one of the group of men and women who made General hospital possible. An organizer of the hospital board, she was one of those who campaigned from house to house to raise funds to build the original building.

She was an organizer of the Women's Club and was on the board of trustees for many years and at one time served as president of the Mansfield Federation of Women. Her membership in the club was one of the few associations she retained up to the time of her death.

Active In P. T. A.

The history of the Mansfield Parent-Teacher movement also carries the name of Mrs. Brinkerhoff, for she was actively identified with the organization of the city's first unit at Brinkerhoff school.

She had been a member of the Nomad Study club and the Mansfield Garden club, and was a member of First Congregational church.

Her only survivors are a daughter, Mrs. Mary B. Gilbert, and two grandsons, Bentley and Henry Gilbert.

The body will be cremated in Cleveland tomorrow and the ashes returned in a silver urn to the home on Bentley avenue where memorial services will be held at 1 p. m. Saturday, with Rev. Peter Young, pastor of First Congregational church, in charge. The urn of ashes will be taken to Mansfield cemetery for interment beside the grave of her husband.

Mrs. Brinkerhoff had planned details of her memorial service and burial and it was her wish that friends would not send flowers, members of her family said.

CHILLS BRITISH HOPES FOR HELP AGAINST NAZIS

up normal trade relations with Rome.

"After consultation, it is possible to achieve mutual understanding with Italy," he added.

No real change had taken place in the relations with Britain, he said, but added that "after the English anti-Soviet tendencies of which we have spoken here, there could be little chance of improving our relations."

He acknowledged, however, that the appointment of the British Leftist leader, Sir Stafford Cripps, as ambassador to Moscow "reflects England's desire to improve understanding."

Asserting that future relations with Finland "depend on Finland," Molotoff disclosed that the Finns had agreed to demilitarization of the Aland islands, which control the entrance to the Gulf of Bothnia and the approach to Sweden's eastern coast.

"If certain circles there (in Finland) will not stop their anti-Soviet tendencies our relations will suffer," Molotoff warned.

British, Germans Continue Air Duel

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—Several persons were killed today when a German bomber dived through clouds from a great height and bombed and machine-gunned a town of southeastern England. Fires were started by bombs.

(By Associated Press)

Nazi bombers, favored by improving weather, spread the war of aerial attrition up and down the English coast today, hammering away with high explosives at the ports which link a world empire.

The British ministry of home security, however, minimized the damage inflicted by the raiders.

The German high command gave point to a statement of Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, that Britain would be brought low by bombing and blockade by announcing "night raids . . . against ships and facilities in southern English ports, as well as against searchlight positions.

Last night, the high command said, there were air fights near Dover—the vital channel port which Nazi bombers raided Monday. West of the Scilly islands, about 125 miles off Lands End, England, armed merchantships were bombarded, the communique said.

Like Gayda, military observers in Germany emphasized the point of making English ports useless for receiving war supplies.

The Nazis claimed to have shot down five British planes and two barrage balloons in the battle near Dover, as well as three British planes entering Norwegian, Dutch and Danish territory. They admitted two of their own were missing. In England it was believed three German planes were brought down.

The high command also acknowledged that British planes had raided Germany, but declared their bombs had been dropped in Hanover, far from any military objective.

Britain's own counter strategy of extending her blockade from the Arctic to North Africa brought word from Tokyo today, through Domei, Japanese news agency, that the Japanese ambassador at London would protest, declaring Japan's trade with Spain, Portugal and other neutrals would suffer.

And while western Europe waited for a possible outbreak of blitzkrieg methods against Britain—for many were skeptical of Gayda's statement and apparent German agreement with the notion—there was excitement and gayety in Russia.

The supreme Soviet, Russia's parliament, convened to welcome formally the states of Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania into the Union. All three voted the Union last month.

Germans intimated that invasion was not in the immediate picture—but said the battle of Britain already was on.

That battle went into its new phase last Monday when dive bombers concentrated in a harbor-wrecking attack on Dover, German military observers declared. Now, they said, the Stukas can smash the rest of England's harbor and shipping facilities port by port.

The British, who have conceded some damage to southeastern ports, broadened their own blockade effective at midnight last night from the Arctic to Africa.

In the South Atlantic east of Brazil British warships were believed to have taken up the chase of a German raider which fought to a draw with the British merchant cruiser Alcantara.

At least one direct hit killed two and wounded seven aboard the 22,000-ton Alcantara and so cut the merchant cruiser's speed that she had to give up the chase and limp to Rio De Janeiro, 660 miles east of the Brazilian island of Trinidad, where the fight took place. The raider with disappearing guns fled behind a smoke screen.

Elsewhere in the war at sea, Britain announced the sinking of the 1,375-tone Delight, 29th British destroyer lost in the war, after a bombing attack.

The Italian high command said Italian fliers had sunk a British destroyer in the eastern Mediterranean July 28, but did not identify it; and also claimed the air force destroyed two British planes in a fight over Malta.

An RAF communique issued at Cairo, Egypt, said two Italian submarines had been sunk in the Mediterranean last month, and an Italian fighter plane had been shot out of a formation yesterday in an attempted raid on Malta.

A Madrid radio broadcast said a battle squadron of three British battleships, an aircraft carrier, four destroyers and five submarines headed into the Mediterranean from Gibraltar on an undisclosed mission.

In the air war, German raiders struck during the night in the neighborhood of the Thames estuary, shipping entrance to London, and of the Bristol channel, west coast waterway, but the British government said damage was slight and no casualties resulted.

Radio stations at Bremen and Hamburg were reported silent, indicating British raids on Germany.

In the Far East, the Japanese admiralty spokesman in Tokyo asserted President Roosevelt's embargo on exporting aviation gasoline outside the western hemisphere "undoubtedly is designed to exert economic pressure on Japan and the Rome-Berlin Axis. If America continues on the same lines it is bound to cause repercussions," he added.

At the same time the new government of Prince Fumimaro Konoye issued a lengthy statement of policy which outlined a strongly centralized and unified state designed for creation of "a new order for greater east Asia."

Hollywood Divorcee Sought On Kidnaping Charge

STAR FINDER'S FORMER WIFE TAKES CHILD

Checkered Romance Recalled In Search for Boy Who Might Be Heir.

(By International News Service)

LOS ANGELES—Charged with kidnaping a 16 months old boy who may prove heir to a vast estate, Mrs. Marianne Schultz Moore, 33, divorced former wife of the late Raymond H. Moore, millionaire discoverer of some of Hollywood's most famous stars, was sought in Los Angeles today on a bench warrant issued in Santa Barbara.

Mrs. Moore, Los Angeles police were informed, took the child, who she claims is her own, from a Santa Barbara detention home last Saturday. The child had been placed in the home on the allegation that Mrs. Moore was unfit to care for it.

A citation to appear in juvenile court to show cause why the child should not be made a ward of the court was not served as Mrs. Moore could not be located. This resulted in issuance of the warrant, which recalled one of the most checkered romances in America.

Moore, a graduate of Stanford and Johns Hopkins universities, several years ago met and married Mrs. Edna Bradley Tweedley, an elderly widow who had inherited $10,000,000 from her Wisconsin lumber baron father, Edward Bradley. In subsequent litigation, Moore won most of the fortune.

He used a large portion of it to build a beautiful summer theater at Denis, a village on Cape Cod.

To this theater came a girl who was hired as an usher, and who finally got a chance to appear on the stage. She was Bette Davis. Others who made good at the theater were Henry Fonda and Elissa Landi.

Moore came to Hollywood a widower and in 1938 suffered a nervous breakdown. In a sanitarium he met a nurse named Marianne Schultz. He was 38 then and she was 31. They were married in February of that year but in December Moore filed suit for divorce, which was granted the following February.

On March 9, 1939, Moore died, leaving an estate of $500,000. The next month Mrs. Moore appeared with a boy, Michael Dennis Moore, who she said was born to her in a Greenwich, Conn., nursing home, and said Moore was the father.

She sued to establish guardianship but never pressed the suit. At the time of Moore's death, Mrs. Moore was seeking to set aside the divorce, and also filed claims to the estate.

Moore had denied the child about to be born to his wife was his.

BANK CLEARINGS JUMP $700,000

July Transactions Total $7,864,369; Seventh Month to Show Increase.

Up nearly $700,000 from the July, 1939, figures Mansfield bank clearings amounted to $7,874,369 last month, Barney Burns, secretary of the Clearing House association, reported today.

July was the seventh consecutive month in which clearings showed a gain over the corresponding month of last year and the month's clearings were the second highest so far this year. Only January clearings were higher.

The July increase boosted total clearings for the year to $53,776,901, a gain of approximately 12 per cent over the figures for the first seven months of 1939 when the city's four banks cleared $48,777,230.

The gain for July reflected a decided pick-up in business and industrial activity, since the June clearings slumped from the pace set earlier in the year. Clearings for July were $160,200 above the June figures.

Mansfield Boy, 11, Invalid Two Years, Sees First Game

Probably one of the most rabid fans of the Cleveland Indians baseball team in Mansfield, an 11-year-old boy, who has been bedfast for nearly two years, was realizing one of his dreams this afternoon as he sat in the Cleveland stadium watching his favorite team in action against the Boston Red Sox.

He is Melvin Watson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon L. Watson, Fifth avenue extension, taken to Cleveland to see his first major league game.

Young Watson has been confined to his bed for nearly two years due to a hip injury.

He not only is interested in the American league but also the National league race and according to his father, he can give the batting average of nearly every player. His favorite player, like a lot of boys, is Bob Feller.

The trip was made possible by C. W. Marks, 205 Helen avenue, and J. B. Miller, 23 Beymiller street, who knew of the boy's desire to see a baseball game, and H. W. Horton, vice president of the Central National bank, Cleveland, who supplied the tickets for the party.

Young Watson will watch the game from his specially constructed cot which will be placed in a front row box in the Municipal stadium. He was taken to Cleveland by his father and Miller.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those smarting, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

TRAFFIC SQUAD REPORTS 855 JULY CITATIONS

819 Given Parking Tickets, 36 Arrested for Reckless Driving, Speeding.

Mansfield's newly established traffic squad showed marked results today in the police department's monthly report which revealed an all-time record high of citations for traffic violations.

Police Chief Meade K. Bates in a report to Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton showed that a total of 819 citations were issued for parking violations and that 36 arrests were made for traffic violations, including reckless driving and speeding.

Parking citations were issued by motorcycle men and beat patrolmen. The motorcycle and the cruiser division made the arrests for speeding and reckless driving.

Of the 36 drivers arrested for traffic violations, 14 were cited for speeding, 17 for reckless driving and five for operating an automobile while under the influence of alcohol.

Total fines and costs, including payment of traffic tickets was $1,688 for the month of July. Collections on tickets amounted to $861 and fines and costs in the balance of the cases totaled another $827.

This month's traffic record was not the result of any "war" or "blitzkrieg" on offenders, Chief Bates said today, but rather a steady enforcement from day to day of existing traffic regulations.

Bates said that one of the fundamentals in solving any traffic problem was to have the cooperation of the driving public and the only way to make the public "traffic conscious" was steady enforcement of regulations rather than occasional drives against offenders.

SENATOR URGES NEUTRAL PARTY

Anti-Intervention Political Organization Advocated.

WASHINGTON—(INS)—A third party—an anti-intervention party—was advocated today by Sen. Lundeen (F-L) Minn., to conduct "a fighting drive for America and American interests."

He said such a party was needed because the platforms of the Democratic and Republican parties are committed to aiding Great Britain so that empire may win the war. Lundeen charged such a policy is "absolutely contrary and hostile" to George Washington's foreign policy. He pleaded for a policy of strict neutrality.

CHICAGO RABBI SELECTED TO FILL TEMPLE EMANUEL PULPIT

Announcement was made today of the appointment of a permanent rabbi for Temple Emanuel, the first that church has ever had in this city.

Rabbi Myron W. Jacobs, assistant to Dr. G. George Fox of South Shore Temple, Chicago, will come to Mansfield Sept. 1 to take over the duties as head of the church, according to Martin R. Goodman, president of the board of trustees of Temple Emanuel.

For several years the church has been served by Rabbi Charles Latz of Canton, and prior to that the pulpit has been filled on occasions by guest rabbis from other cities.

Rabbi Jacobs is a native of Cleveland and a graduate of the University of Chicago. He received a degree in law at Ohio Northern and took advanced theological studies at Hebrew Union, Cincinnati, and the Jewish Institute of Religion in New York City.

For five years he served as rabbi in Troy, N. Y. After two years of travel around the world he became executive director and rabbi of the Jewish Community Center in Gloversville, N. Y. He is a member of Rotary club and was prominent in civic affairs of that city. For the past year he has been in Chicago.

Rabbi Jacobs was first introduced to Mansfield Jewish circles a month ago when he came here to address B'Nai B'Rith. He plans to organize groups in adult education and a high school group within the church after he takes up his new work here. Regular church services will be held on Friday nights.

He and his wife expect to move here the latter part of August. Arrangements for his appointment here were made by the church board of which Goodman is president, Aaron Goldsmith, vice president; and Jack C. Kalish, secretary-treasurer.

Judging Starts in Fair's Poultry Show

As judging of poultry got under way at the Richland county fair today, Judges George Page, holding chicken, and K. G. Shilling, at his left, examine a hen being exhibited by Maxwell Barker of near Lexington.

Boosting an ale or beer by stringing together a lot of fancy adjectives would have puzzled Peter Ballantine. He discovered, a century ago, that every good quality in an ale or beer can be summed up in just three words . . . PURITY, BODY, FLAVOR.

These are the qualities symbolized by the famous 3 rings; the qualities that make Ballantine's the first choice of millions. Join these knowing ones in a glass today; call for Ballantine's . . . On draught . . . in bottles and cans (12 oz. and full quart). America's Finest Since 1840.

Quick Aid To Britain Urged

DISREGARDING all pretense of neutrality, the "Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies" is urging the sale of at least sixty over-age United States navy destroyers to Great Britain to bolster her defense forces.

This national organization, of which William Allen White, Emporia, Kansas, publisher is chairman, is engaged in an intensive campaign for adequate national defense and the greatest possible support of Great Britain's war against Hitlerism.

"Between us and Hitler stands the British fleet," says a statement of the committee in which it is argued that the United States should immediately supply Great Britain with materials desperately needed to continue the battle.

Hitler is quoted as saying to his followers: "It will be a simple matter for me to produce unrest and revolt in the United States so that these gentry will have their hands full with their own affairs . . . We shall soon have storm troopers in America . . . We shall have men whom degenerate Yankeedom will not be able to challenge."

Quoting President Roosevelt, in support of the committee's plea: "We will extend to the opponents of force the material resources of this nation and, at the same time, we will harness and speed up the use of those resources in order that we ourselves in the Americas may have equipment and training equal to any emergency and every defense."

Wendell Willkie is also quoted: "On behalf of our peace and security and our own spiritual values, we should give the democracies such assistance as we can, short of war."

"Hitler's dream of a world under Nazi rule cannot be realized as long as Britain holds out," says the committee, in urging American citizens to write or telegraph to senators and congressmen to sell over-age destroyers to Britain and give other material aid—before it is too late.

"Think where we would be if the British fleet fell to the dictators and was used against us," is the final admonition. "If Hitler captures England the dictators and Japan would have eight times the shipbuilding capacity of the United States."

Hemispheric Trade Problems

A REASSURING fact about the economic proposals which emerged from the Havana Conference is that they do not attempt too much. The cartel idea, under which all surplus commodities in South America would have been purchased and held for special control, was dropped as its implications became better understood. It might never have succeeded and, at best, it would have been prohibitive in cost.

Instead, different commodities will be dealt with separately and according to the specific problems they present. Loans are planned to make it possible for a producer to turn down an unfavorable barter offer. An inter-American financial and economic advisory committee, with headquarters in Washington, will act as clearing house.

The basic problem remains—natural rivalry under existing producing and marketing systems between the two continents. Wheat, beef and cotton are important agricultural products in each. How can trade conflicts be overcome without injustice to anyone concerned? Will the development of more industries in South America and the wiser use of its rich and scarcely tapped natural resources help?

It is to be hoped that, if we weather the immediate economic storms created by the totalitarian powers, we can then get at the business of solving trade riddles which were difficult long before the Nazis added more complications.

Parking On Narrow Streets

PARKING cars on both sides of narrow streets, and on moderate-width streets carrying unusually heavy traffic, was a point covered in the recent report of the citizens' traffic committee which has already borne fruit in the form of an application to city council by Lexington avenue residents asking that parking be limited to one side of that thoroughfare between Main street and Dunbilt court.

Such a restriction has been in satisfactory operation on several Mansfield streets for a number of years, notably West Second from Mulberry to Sturges avenue, but action has been postponed on a number of other narrow streets, largely because some residents argued that the restriction should apply to "the other side of the street."

The paved roadway is so narrow on some of these streets that when cars are parked on both sides, sometimes for a block or more, only a one-way lane is left in the middle of the street—a dangerous situation and one which frequently results in damage to parked cars.

Application of ANY traffic restriction necessarily requires some sacrifice of convenience, but the advantages of limiting parking to one side of narrow streets appear to weigh much heavier than the resultant inconvenience to residents of these streets.

Listing of all streets to which this regulation should apply, and action by council without unnecessary loss of time, would seem to be entirely proper procedure as a step toward betterment of Mansfield's traffic conditions.

Hospitals for Pampered Pets

LOS ANGELES, besides being a haven for film followers and midwestern farmers, is also a sort of dog and cat heaven. A correspondent from that sector writes that there are more pet shops, dog kennels, cat hotels, canine boarding houses and bird hospitals in the City of Angels than anywhere else in the country. And they all seem to be well patronized. Los Angeles residents last year paid nearly a quarter of a million dollars for dog licenses alone.

For every virtue there is a corresponding vice. The vice in this connection is being too kind to the pets. One woman in Los Angeles makes a good living for herself by treating sick birds that have been nearly killed with kindness. Canaries' stomachs, it seems, are easily upset. This bird doctor lady puts them on a simple diet and they usually pull through.

Cat and dog hotels prosper most in the summer, when owners go traveling.

A Canton old-age pensioner threatens to go to work unless his pension is increased—not seeming to realize that the New Deal is not yet in full operation.

For the past couple of weeks more persons than usual have been earning their bread by the sweat of their brow.

Usually when you "let the cat out of the bag" it turns out to be a very ordinary cat.

Listen, World!

He Broke the Prison Bars.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

JIM TREES, 38-year-old convict, escaped from the Madison, Ill., state prison.

Jim was up for a ten-year term for robbery. Nice, quiet sort of a chap, handy with tools. Everyone took to him. Then along came one of those parole enthusiasts. Demanding "Out!" for Jim Trees. But before he could get action, Jim was gone. Had, in fact, been gone for months before anyone suspected it!

Yes, I know what you're thinking, but you're wrong. 'Tisn't another one of those penitentiary scandals you've been reading about: lax wardens, bribed guards—all that sort of thing—an underworld Big Shot. No one ever made a cleaner break than Jim Trees; and no one was prouder of it than the prison directors.

For the bars which Jim broke, slowly and painfully, while everyone thought he was sleeping soundly in his bunk, were not of prison steel. And the walls he climbed were not of prison stone. They were part of Jim's own nature. And when they were broken, not all the wardens on earth could keep Jim a prisoner.

It came about simply enough. Jim wanted music. He knew, as no free man could, how desperately forgotten men need music to lift them out of madness and memories they dare not face. A pipe organ, particularly, might mean all the difference between hope and despair. And Jim was director of the prison band. But that doesn't turn you into a Toscanini or give you his income. So how about that pipe organ? Even optimistic Jim had to admit that the chances were mighty slim.

First off, Jim was no organist. His previous talents had run in other directions—and definitely. One doesn't do a second-story job to the accompaniment of Schubert's "Serenade." Hardly! Moreover, even if Jim had known his pipes, where were the makings? State penitentiaries are rarely adorned with such ornamental gadgets as pipe organs. Such an instrument requires four hundred and fifty pipes besides a motor, air compressor and keyboard, not to mention tubes, valves, wiring, magnetic coils, etc., etc., etc.

Quite a dream for even a regular citizen with a bankroll, which Jim wasn't. Jim was a convict with more miles of shame and discouragement coiled round his weary heart than a dozen organs would require.

But also, somewhere down in the darkness of those coils, there was a song that "wanted out." And a courage that vowed it could be done! So Jim set about the doing.

No space here to describe that four-year job. First there was the learning how. Jim's mother saw to that. Sent him books by the best authorities on organ construction. Helped him wrangle scraps of leather, odds and ends of wood and copper.

The other prisoners became interested and helped. With endless patience they salvaged bits of this and that, made one hundred of the pipes themselves. The four hundred and fifty magnetic coils needed to control the valve action were made out of thirty dollars' worth fine copper wire, the prison's contribution. The result is valued at seven thousand dollars—and it actually cost only one hundred dollars.

So Jim brought music into his dumb, dark hell . . . and, in time, Jim was freed. But he was really released long before his parole was granted. From the day he dreamed of that organ . . . from the hour he wrenched away the bars of bitterness, apathy and despair, and reached for a larger life, for himself and others, all that was essential in Jim Trees went free.

I'm thinking of all the other prisoners I know . . . myself among them: Poor, shackled things, bent over kitchen sinks, factory benches, store counters, office files . . . as truly imprisoned as any numbered convict. Yet the thing that holds them is not a steel bar but something in themselves . . . sorrow or greed . . . hate or envy . . . laziness and indifference . . . self-pity and self-righteousness . . . fear and fury. Self-made bars, crueler than any prison rod.

BREAK THOSE AND YOU'LL BE FREE. BUT NEVER UNTIL YOU DO!

Being Generous Without Money

"Most of us are exceedingly generous with the millions we do not possses, and we smugly offer our lack of money as excuse for our lack of generosity," suggests Corinne Updegraff Wells, who writes about "Philanthrophy without Money" in the current Rotarian Magazine. "Yet generosity has surprisingly little to do with money . . . Ingenuity and imagination often provide gifts which make presents purchased with money seem cheap and tawdry by comparison."

But how? There's that spare time on your hands that you can donate to an overburdened mother, to a charitable organization, or at the nearest play park where youngsters long for someone to teach the mysteries of kites and model airplanes. And your car with its empty back seat when you take a Sunday afternoon drive into the country! Why not fill it with convalescent-ward patients from the nearest hospital, or oldsters from the community home for the aged? And hobbies! Here's a gold mine for sharing joys, for philanthrophy without money, suggests Author Wells.

Hollyhocks Along Roads.

There are always among us, thank goodness, a great many people who hold fast to the belief that merely because something is useful there is no reason why it cannot also be beautiful. This happy thought has struck a part of the state highway department, and the central Ohio division (officially No. 6) has dedicated itself to dressing up the highways in this part of the state. It has adopted the hollyhock as the roadside orchid and will be pleased to receive from any public-spirited beauty lover any hollyhock seeds he might wish to contribute.

Here is a laudable enterprise. Roads lined with multi-colored hollyhock. Roads made colorful and cool-looking. Roads over which it will be even a greater pleasure to drive than now. The activity is something distinctive, and if it works out there is a reasonable possibility that other divisions of the department will follow suit and thus bring unusual attention to Ohio. — Columbus Dispatch.

Farley's Memoirs Not Complete; Job With Yankees Only Sideline

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Jim Farley made $68,500 from his best-selling book, Behind the Ballots—the inside story of how Roosevelt won the presidency in 1932. Jim is now convinced he has the material for another book that should be worth at least $100,000.

It's the inside story of his relations with the president as a member of the cabinet, of their rift over political policies, the third term, Jim's own presidential ambitions, and of the hectic behind-the-scenes events at the recent Chicago convention.

Jim has filing cases of carefully preserved material for his memoirs. Only intimates know it, but he has also kept a detailed diary of every day's events since he tied up with Roosevelt nine years ago. The first thing Jim did after the Chicago convention was to hide himself away for three days to dictate his own account of what happened behind the scenes, including two brief telephone conversations with Roosevelt and an equally brief personal meeting with White House generalissimo Harry Hopkins.

But one important part of Jim's new book is still missing — the last chapter.

He still has to secure the president's explanation of two key points: One, what caused him, beginning early in 1938, gradually to ease Jim out of the picture as political helmsman; and two, whether the president really did oppose Farley's presidential ambitions because he is a Catholic.

Religious Issue.

FARLEY'S friends lay much of the blame for his shelving upon Hopkins. Hopkins always has professed to be a strong Farley Booster, but Jim's lieutenants claim they have good grounds to believe that actually this was not the case.

The president has publicly denied a syndicate article which said he told a Southern congressman that Farley could not be on the Democratic ticket because he is a Catholic. But Jim is not satisfied with this repudiation.

So before he steps out of the cabinet he intends to sit down with Roosevelt and put this and the other question up to him, man to man. What transpires will give Jim his missing last chapter.

Note—In the last chapter of Behind the Ballots, under the sub-caption "A Little Advice," Farley made these interesting observations: "A good thing to remember is that nothing is ever gained by trying to seek revenge in politics. The man who starts out to destroy another man for revenge usually winds up by destroying himself . . . The yearning for the White House has ruined more than one distinguished career."

Yankees' Boss.

BOSSING the New York Yankees baseball club will be only a sideline with Jim when he returns to private life next month.

His big-money job will be as president of Willys-Overland at $100,000 a year. Under his contract, Farley will stand to make a lot more than this if the company does well under his management. If Willys-Overland sells 200,000 cars next year, for a net profit of $10,000,000, Jim would get a slice of this melon in addition to his handsome salary.

Farley secretly completed the auto deal last week during the Chicago convention. The contracts were flown there from New York.

Jim will get $25,000 a year as Yankees president, plus half the common stock of the syndicate that is taking over the club. Contrary to a widespread report, the actual price being paid for the outfit is $2,500,000 and not $4,000,000. That is what was asked, but $2,500,000 was finally agreed upon.

Principal participants in the syndicate are James M. Cox, genial newspaper publisher and 1920 Democratic candidate for president, and Jock Whitney, famous sportsman and ex-husband of the famed "Liz" Whitney. The syndicate will hold all the preferred stock and the other half of the common.

Farley's duties will be only nominal and he will have plenty of time for selling automobiles.

Note — Farley is leaving the date of his retirement from the cabinet up to the president.

Knudsen Knows.

THOSE ultra-secret powwows of the National Defense commission, are not always confined to weighty problems of rearmament. Sometimes the discussion has to do with self-defense.

One scorching afternoon recently, the commission was deliberating a production matter in the auto industry when Sidney Hillman, labor member of the agency, remarked that he was troubled with a personal problem in the industry. He said he had been invited to address the CIO Auto Workers convention in St. Louis, but was hesitant about doing so.

"I want very much to go," said Hillman, "but I don't want to do anything that might impair my effectiveness on the commission in working with the AFL and CIO. I'm a neutral now and I don't want to change that status."

Hillman's dilemma brought a hearty chuckle from giant William Knudsen, production wizard of the commission.

"It's certainly tough on you, Sydney," said the former General Motors president, "but I know just how you feel. The Auto Workers had me on a spot in 1937 during their sitdown strike. That was a pretty hot spot and it wasn't any more fun than the one you are up against."

Air Defense.

THE seriousness with which the Army Air Corp regards the threat of air attacks against the United States is seen in the private advices they gave an official who came to Washington to discuss a new airport at Los Angeles.

It had been planned to make the airport comparable in size to LaGuardia Field in New York, but Air Corps officials were definitely negative. They said that no military purpose is served by a large airport, but rather that it becomes a hazard in defense operations because it is an easy target for bombing. "Look what happened to the airports and airdromes of France."

Air Corps advisers said future U. S. airports should include underground hangars, and runways made of criss-crossed open-work paving, rather than solid paving. Purpose is to allow grass to grow in the open spaces of the criss-cross, and thus prevent photographing from the air.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—We were having the veal pie in Sam's at lunch yesterday when Monte Proser dropped into an adjoining chair. Monte is a young man with horn-rim glasses, a sad smile, and a conviction that disappointment is the inevitable reward for those who expect too much from life.

This is by no means the melancholy philosophy of a young man who has been frustrated by life. No doubt at times he feels frustrated, but a careful analysis of his deeds and experiments reveals something of the salt of variety, of changing color, of sunny days as well as glum ones. Monte used to be a hobo. He still is, at heart. He has been known to Broadway since the early days of repeal. He has been a press agent. He has shipped on cattle boats and slept in open fields. Once he worked for Herbert Hoover. Once he was a guide in Yellowstone Park. He is a restaurant owner now, or rather a night club owner. And in recent months he has been rather widely heralded as the father of the "zombie."

ALMOST everybody in New York knows what the zombie is. It is an after-dark beverage so powerful that not more than two may be sold to a customer. This, of course, is strictly the okra soup. A man's capacity is his own business, though personally I would be afraid to travel in the company of people who could, or would want to, carry more than two of those tall rum-inspired concoctions under their belts.

The zombie, so far as Manhattan is concerned, first made its appearance in Proser's Broadway restaurant about eight months ago. This was the Beachcomber which now, like Woolworth's and the A&P stores, has become a chain, with sister clubs throughout the country. After the lean days, some of which were shadow-thin, Monte is back in the sunshine, though his smile remains as melancholy as ever. A Puerto Rican company even has contracted to put out zombies in bottles. You would think that this would bring some sense of elation. But these are strange times. Monte's way of expressing satisfaction is a sort of half-hearted shrug. That is hard to explain, but then most things about Monte are hard to explain.

ONCE he sent me a canary without any explanation. It was in the winter. I took the bird out into the snow, where the sunlight was strong, to take its picture. A few days later it died of pneumonia. Monte's reaction was typical. "That's the trouble with this climate," he said. "You can't even keep canary birds."

On another occasion I was to meet him at Dempsey's on Broadway because Jim Tully was going to be there, and when Tully is in town it is natural for anyone who has ever ridden the rods to gather around. Tully is a man who, like Jack London, used his hobo days as a springboard to literary fame.

But Monte wasn't there. Next day came a wire from Dempsey's hotel—in Miami. "What detains you?" the wire wanted to know.

That, in a way, is definitive of Monte Proser. Names mean a lot to him—time and distance nothing at all.

This Is Ohio

Flint Ridge park, located some 40 miles east of Columbus, contains the quarries from which mound builders and Indians got material for their weapons and tools.

Flint forms the cap-rock of the ridge, which for a distance of ten miles is scarred with trenches and pits, left by the aboriginal diggers, while surrounding fields and farms are covered with large quantities of chippings where the flint was dressed. In many instances these dressed stones were carried great distances before they were worked into their finished shapes.

Flint Ridge possibly was as valuable to the aborigines as coal and iron of Ohio and Pennsylvania are to the white men of the present day.

A Farmer's Diary

Going Swimming

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

A LITTLE more than a mile below our home great ledges of mossy sandstone rocks protrude above the peacefully flowing Clearfork. "The Rocks" are known to history and legend as a scenic spot, and a spot for summer enjoyment. Varieties of ferns grow from the crevices above the stream, and near a swinging bridge our children and the neighbors' children splash and dive and shout all through the hot afternoons.

The water flows slow and clear, deeply green in spots, mirroring the leaning sycamores and elms above it. To float slowly in the current, only one's chin, eyes and nose above the surface—to feel the buoyant coolness all about—to watch a little twig rise and fall among choppy waves, or a dragon fly light skillfully upon a weed at the edge, is restful to tired nerves. I noticed myriad of insects in the space just above the water, and saw a swallow, open-mouthed, fly through and leave a void behind. A large green poplar leaf fell rapidly and sailed across my knees.

A raft built of planks buoyed by four empty 50-gallon oil drums, is tethered to the bridge. From it the bathers dive or on it rest and sun themselves. I watched the boys' dark heads disappear as they hunted for clams on the bottom and saw the wet braided pigtails float on either side of my daughter's head. The brown bodies of the youngsters glistened as they clambered in and out. In shallower water at one side, two smaller boys were having a water fight. I heard the spontaneous laughter of young funsters, and the shrill sharp cry of one who had too much.

The smell of the water was all about—limpid splashing spray fell below the rocks, tiger lilies bloomed near the edge and mirrored themselves below. High upon the ledges summer cabins stood. Behind, above, beyond, orchards clothed the hills.

"Our family is in the water from dawn until dark," my neighbor said. "We want them all to swim — it's a wonderful sport."

"I learned the jellyfish roll and the dead man's float," declared my son. "And I tried to dive, but it was a belly swapper."

fic enforcement program, but we can't do both with the present staff."

Last year, he said, the department conducted 5,800 investigations many of which entailed days of work and hundreds of extra hours for his men.

Bates told officials that the need for additional men was the direct result of a wave of house burglaries and robberies the past month which has left citizens apprehensive and kept police working overtime on investigations.

It was pointed out that although the city has doubled in population during the past 20 years, the department still has only two plainclothesmen, the same number as it had in 1920.

Locke said today that if some means could be found to finance the appointment of two men through the fall, he was confident a proposed one-mill levy, from which funds would be provided for the police department, would be approved by the voters at the November election.

Here are some pictures taken yesterday of the parade which climaxed Ashland's celebration of its 125 years of history. On the float at upper right is Miss Margaret Thornburg, queen of the Cen-Quar, and her court, all members of Ashland's pioneer families. At upper left is the Ashland florists' float. The old and new in law enforcement is shown at lower right with the old-time sheriff of horse- and-buggy days leading the motor-equipped officer of today. Another of the many beautiful floats which marked the parade is seen at lower left.

EXCURSIONS ARE PLANNED FOR MANSFIELD DAY AT WORLD FAIR

New York World's Fair officials have set aside Tuesday, Aug. 20 as "Mansfield Day" at the exposition, it was announced today by Mayor W. J. Locke.

Pennsylvania railroad officials will co-operate with the Fair and the city in setting up a "bargain day" excursion for Mansfielders who desire to attend the Fair and to make the trip in as short a time as possible.

The company announced a low-rate excursion this week and has distributed thousands of folders over the city telling of the event. The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, which has one of the largest exhibits at the exposition, will co-operate by having something special for Mansfield guests on that day. It is expected that a number of Westinghouse employes will take advantage of the Mansfield Day excursion since it occurs during the Westinghouse vacation shut-down here.

The excursion train will leave here Sunday evening, Aug. 18 at 7:15 arriving in New York at 7:15 a. m. Monday and will return at 6:30 p. m. Aug. 20, arriving home at 7 a. m. the following day.

There will be two special tours: one to New York City and return, with hotel rooms at either the McAlpin hotel or the Governor Clinton, a sightseeing trip around New York and a trip through Radio City, for $20.55; and the other one an extended tour, the same as the first one but adding a day in Washington, D. C., for $29.05.

Return tickets will be good for 20 days from the date issued. All reservations must be in the hands of Pennsylvania railroad officials by Aug. 15. The Erie railroad has no special excursion for that week, but has a weekly excursion rate to New York City, with hotel room and sightseeing trip, extending from Saturday afternoon through the following Thursday, for $32.65.

Information on Mansfield Day excursion, accommodations and trips may be had at the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce, the Pennsylvania railroad ticket office, or the City building.

LUCKY FOR LOVE + + + + + +

CHAPTER VI

"For why should you ask me such a crazy question? For why? You have love trouble, maybe?

Al made a gesture of disdain.

"You know better than that," he said. "What I think of these Bouquets of Beauty—I'd rather have a nail in the foot."

"What's wrong with 'em?" thundered the Chief. "Most beautiful girls in America. Most glamorous girls in—in—"

"Six counties," Al finished. "They're dumb, that's what's the matter with 'em. I hate dumb daisies. They give me mal de mer."

"Maldee—, mal—de—"

"It's what you get when the boat rocks."

"Umm. Now this miss—Miss—"

"Marsh. Clara Marsh. Blonde hope of the Bijou."

"This Miss Clara Marsh, she is what you call a bee-u-ty. Perfect blonde. Perfect figure—a little tupe maybe—but plenty like 'em so. Maybe she don't give out. Maybe she don't like the bright lights. Maybe she's too quiet."

Al laughed sardonically.

He said, "Chief, if she likes 'em any better, we'd have to take her out and shoot her. That's where the trouble comes in, that's why I'm yelling help, and take it from me, I'm yelling, Chief, that blonde is sure a glutton for what goes on in the big town after dark. I managed to trundle her back to her hotel at six this morning, but it was a struggle."

"So? Six, huh?" The Chief's scowl deepened. "Who pays that kind of expenses. We promised to show our winners the town, not buy it for 'em."

"Don't raise your blood pressure about expenses, Chief," Al Martino said. "I've kept within the limit. You know the game. We go into a night club I slip the headwaiter a five spot to pass around the word there's a beauty prize winner in the dump and to point her out. Right away the he-bees in the dump begin to buzz around. Chief, this Millville blond can pick up more suckers than Oregon has apples. Especially the bald suckers."

Palmer Watson roared with laughter. "What's wrong with her taking 'em if they ask to be took?" he managed, between roars. "We didn't bring her up here to keep her in hiding, did we? "She's not Little Goldielocks. Er—that reminds me, how old is she? We don't want any stuff about minors—"

"Don't worry. There'll be no Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children angle. She's 24. Told me she was 20 when she signed up for the contest. Her kid brother spilled the beans. She got her age mixed up with her sister's that's all."

"Umm. Sister? Not a Beauty Bouqueter, huh, like this one?"

"Chief, the backward blond's sister makes her look like a morning-after gardenia. She's the sweetest, cleanest—aw, what's the use! You can't describe a girl like Marilyn Marsh. Old Webster just hasn't got the words."

"Aha! So now we have it." The Chief was immensely pleased with himself. "The sister. He falls, like a brick house—for the sister. So he gets leary. He thinks maybe the beautiful blond will cut too many capers. Maybe he can't handle her. Maybe he'll get in Dutch with the family. Am I right, my boy? Do I have it?"

Al moved from the corner of the desk to a lacquer red leather chair resembling a cavern.

"You win," he said. "My new torch song's 'I Left My Heart in Millville.' I'm serious this time, Chief. That's why I'm asking you to give me a transfer. I don't like the way Blondie trots. Last night we dropped into the Blue Parrot, you know, that hotsy-totsy joint in East Fifty-Fourth. I slipped the headwaiter the usual five, he went into his act and right away a Good Time Charlie showed up at our table. He started feeding Blondie champagne cocktails, Chief, the way that gal can lap up champagne cocktails is a panic. Like water from the old oaken bucket. I saw she was starting to fizz, so I asked her to take a recess. She squawked, and she squawked loud. She lapped up another couple of rounds just to show me who was boss. So I showed her. I took the next one away from her and told the buyer to beat it. Had a hell of a time getting her out without playiing rough. That's my story. Now will you give me a transfer?"

The Chief scowled so that his brows covered his eyes.

"Umm," he muttered. "Things don't look so good. Scandal, maybe. Metropole can't have scandal with its clients. You call up her hotel. See if it's all right. Better we make a change."

Marilyn Marsh and Sally Meacham walked down the shady side of Main street. It had been a tiring day in the Bon Ton. A book sale. All the customers wanted the same book.

Sally spoke. "How's it for a soda, Lynn? Nice sirupy chocolate ice cream. It's chocolate soda's made me what I am today." She observed her reflection in the shop windows. "Oh, well, what's a soda more or less when you're already a fudge-pudge. Let's stop in the Sugar Bowl. They double-dip their sodas."

"I am thirsty," said Marilyn. "I'll go for an orangeade—fresh oranges."

"The thin ones take orangeade, the fat ones take double-dip. Here we are. Follow me. I know the table under the fan."

Seated, Sally began on the real purpose of the visit.

"Look here, Lynn," she said, "you've simply got to go to the charity ball. It's the best party of the year in Billville; in fact it's the only real party. Every one we know will be there—that is every one we want to know, and it's stacks of fun. Why do you turn it down? Is old age creeping up on you?"

Lynn said, with a smile for Sally's twitting, "My years have not overcome me, entirely, but they are getting me down. If you must know, Miss Pry, I'm not going to the charity ball because I can't afford a new evening dress, and the vintage one I've worn for two years has now become rags and tatters."

"Lynn Marsh," indignantly, "you make me furious. A girl with a thousand dollars in her own name, complaining about not being able to afford a new dress. What do you expect to do? Sit on your money to see if it will hatch?"

"I'm not complaining and I'm not an old hen. Nor, Miss Pry, have I a thousand dollars in my own name."

"What did you do with it?" Sally wanted to know. "Put it in the name of your lawyer?"

"My lawyer is out of town. I put half of it in bonds in the name of William Marsh, jr. They will mature at the time Bill goes to college. Any objections?"

"Of course not, foolish." The depth of her friendship was in Sally's eyes. "It's great, your being able to help Bill. He's a cute kid even if he is your brother. But half a thousand—that leaves five hundred, the way I was taught arithmetic. What about subtracting the price of a dress from the remaining five hundred? What about the blue and silver net we raved about in the Bon Ton. It's a sample, a real one, not a phoney. Sophie in the dresses told me it's such a small size no one has been able to wiggle into it. You said yourself it was the size you wear. They've put it on the sale rack, practically giving it away. Lynn, please nab it the first thing in the morning, will you, and go to the ball?"

"Sally, you're a dear for wanting me to go, but I can't. I'd rather not, honestly. You know I'm helping Dad fix up our house. It needs dozens of things done to it. Nothing fancy, just repairs."

"I suppose house-fixing does run into money. But listen, Santa Claus, aren't you going to break down? Aren't you going to buy anything for yourself?"

Marilyn's smile teased. "I was waiting for that. Of course I'm buying something for myself. Please nab it the first thing in the morning, will you, and go to the ball?"

"Sally, you're a dear for wanting me to go, but I can't. I'd rather not, honestly. You know I'm helping Dad fix up our house. It needs dozens of things done to it. Nothing fancy, just repairs."

"I suppose house-fixing does run into money. But listen, Santa Claus, aren't you going to break down? Aren't you going to buy anything for yourself?"

Marilyn's smile teased. "I was waiting for that. Of course I'm buying something for myself. Something simply stupendous. Something I've wanted so much it hurts. Guess!"

Traveling Executioner Has Experience for Job.

JACKSON, Miss.—(U.P.)—Hypnotist, electrician and veteran of the armed forces, 44-year-old Jimmy Thompson isn't awed by his new job of delivering death to all parts of Mississippi.

Thompson has been hired as the state's official executioner and will carry the new portable electric chair by truck to county seats wherever executions are scheduled.

"It will be nothing new to me," Thompson said when Gov. Paul B. Johnson announced his appointment. "I have helped hang and electrocute men. Part of my experience was obtained at Canyon City, Colo."

Thompson gets $100 for each electrocution. Although his trade now is electrician, he also has made his living as a hypnotist and has served four years in the army, four years in the navy, and two in the marines.

Thompson's home is at D'Lo. He is father of four children.

THEATERS

Newlyweds and Budget.

Attacking the problem of the chance of young Americans to marry and establish their homes in the midst of a big city is the plot of "We Who Are Young," which comes to the Ohio Friday. Lana Turner and John Shelton are co-starred. How the youngsters manage to master the seemingly insurmountable odds makes an interesting story.

Bob Burns and Kinfolk.

Bob Burns has brought his bazooka back to the screen in the new comedy "Alias the Deacon" which is showing through Friday at the Madison. He also relates new stories about his famous kinfolk back in Van Buren, Ark. The story deals with a kindly card sharp who uses his wits and skill to aid worthy but unfortunate friends. Peggy Moran and Dennis O'Keefe furnish the romance. "The Biscuit Eater" is the co-feature.

Western and Jungle Film.

Expert horseman, roper and pistol shot Bob Baker is featured as a lawyer in "Bad Man From Red Butte" which is showing at the Park. Johnny Mack Brown has the leading role which is a dual portrayal of an outlaw and outlaw-hunter. The second attraction is "Zanzibar" with James Craig and Lola Lane as American adventurers in an African jungle

America's Steel Industry.

Telling a graphic story of the lives and loves of men who work in America's giant steel industry is the film "Hot Steel" which opens Friday at the Majestic. Richard Arlen and Andy Devine are co-starred. It is a human story of two men who fight for control of a new steel process Anne Nagel and Peggy Moran have the feminine roles. The co-feature is "The Sagebrush Family Trails West" featuring Bobby Clark, 13-year-old world champion junior cowboy.

Latest Horror Film.

"Black Friday," heralded as the newest idea in horror pictures with Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi in the starring roles opens Friday at the Ritz. A trail of murder unique on the screen is started by Karloff, who as a famous surgeon performs a daring operation by transplanting part of the brain of a criminal into the brain of a quiet little college professor. The co-feature is "Ranger and the Lady," a Roy Rogers picture.
